THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASSES

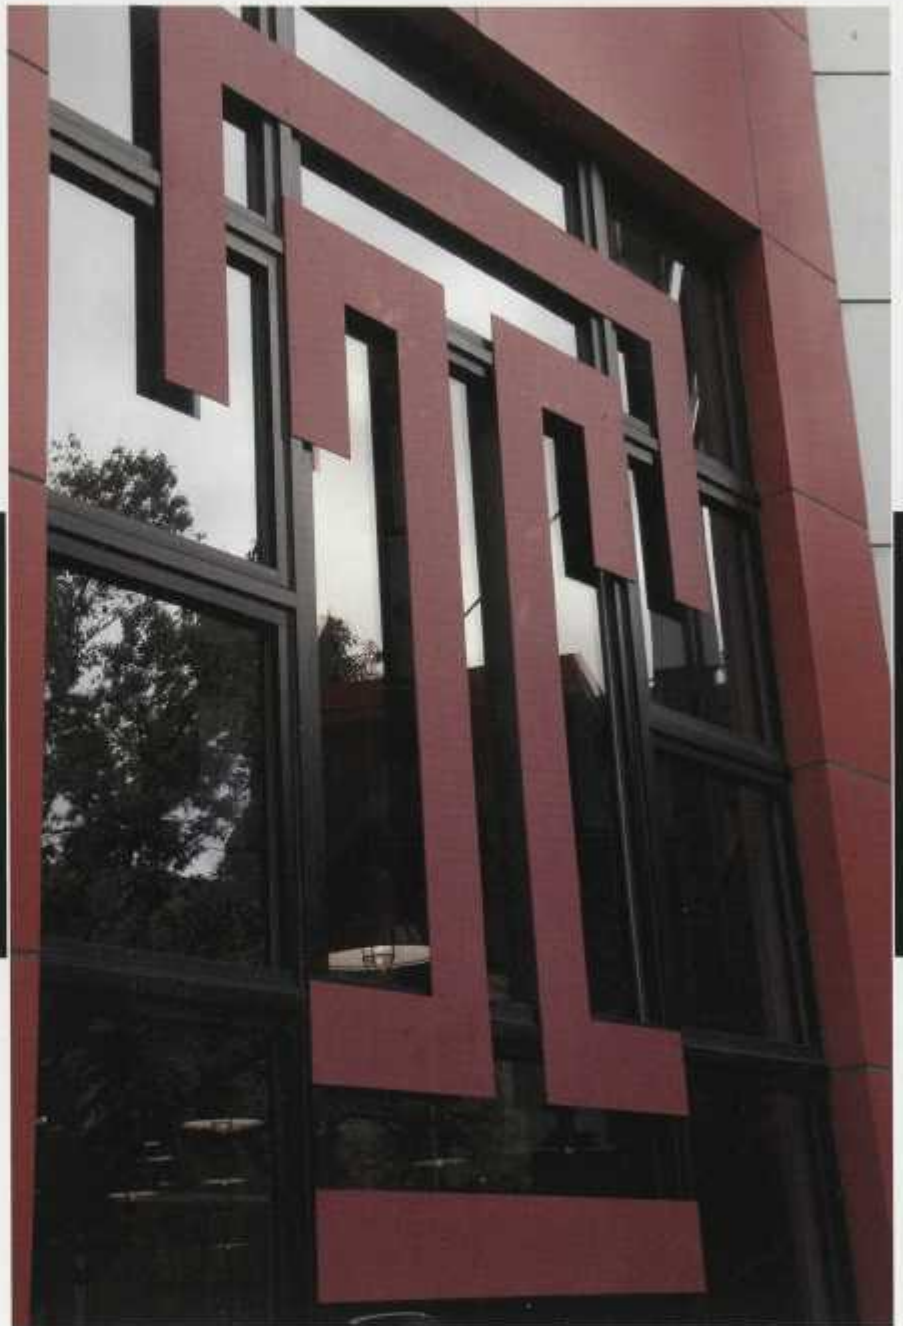

I'll tell you all my ideas about Looking-glass House. First, there's the room you can see through the glass that's just the same as our drawing room, only the things go the other way.

*- Lewis Carroll, Through the Looking-Glass, and What Alice Found There, Ch. 1*

The alarm clock rings. You head into the bathroom to get ready for the day and look into the mirror. Just what is on the other side of the mirror? When we peer into that looking-glass, exactly who is it that is staring us back in the face? At a university with a student body of over 34,000, we are all faced with the dilemma of who we are every day. Should we simply blend in with the rest of the crowd or stand out and be unique? Is that reflection the true 'us' or merely a social construct of what we want others to see us as?

With the opportunities afforded to students at Temple University, there is no reason to stand in the back and pretend to be someone you are not. Providing 123 bachelor's degrees, as well as a host of other degrees, Temple gives students the opportunity to find a major that truly reflects who they are. Even if one's particular major does not reveal his or her complete personality, classes like Adventure Climbing, Themes in Existentialism, and Workings of the Mind are sure to fill in the gaps. Additionally, with over 200 student organizations ranging from Temple Book Club to Yoga Temple, to field-specific fraternities like Gamma Iota Sigma, Temple's Risk Management and Insurance professional organization, the possibilities to express one's individuality are endless.

I wonder if I've been changed in the night? Let me think: was I the same when I got up this morning? I almost think I can remember feeling a little different. But if I'm not the same, the next question is, Who in the world am I?

- Lewis Carroll, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Ch. 2

In the following pages, we peer through the looking-glass at Temple University and see what it means to wear the Cherry and White and take on the role of a Temple Owl. The friends we have, the classes we take and the activities we do all reflect who we are.

Immense diversity within the Temple University student body makes it the perfect place for each individual to seize the opportunity to be him- or herself. Then, when you look in the mirror in the morning and wonder who is on the other side, the answer will be clear. I want to leave you with the words of the Duchess from Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking-Glass, and What Alice Found There, "Be what you would seem to be'--or if you'd like it put more simply--'Never imagine yourself not to be otherwise than what it might appear to others that what you were or might have been was not otherwise than what you had been would have appeared to them to be otherwise.'"

STUDENT LIFE

Among the herd of people walking out of class are individuals from different ethnicities who are all on their way to their destination, whether it is to the Howard Gittis Center, Liacouras Walk, the Independence Blue Cross Fitness Center, or class. Regardless of what social or economic background people come from, they enjoy the experience of being college students at Temple University.

Since its existence in 1884, Temple has placed a huge emphasis on education while making sure students learn in a diverse atmosphere. Students are encouraged to maximize their learning environments inside and outside of the classroom. The possibilities at Temple are endless and the memories long-lasting. There is no telling how many lifelong friends one will make or how many endless memories one will share.

Student life is a general term that encompasses a whole range and variety of topics. A student can be a resident on campus or off campus. Likewise, students can be commuters. They go to classes together, eat their meals together, work out together, and go through trials and tribulations together.

Annual events such as Welcome Week, Homecoming, and The Broad Street Run are just some of the memorable moments students experience with friends. Student life at Temple is unique in comparison to other schools because a Temple student is sure to have story after story of exciting events that they have been through in their four years of college.

On Campus

On a typical day, one can observe a plethora of different things happening on campus.

"There is always something going on around campus. Morning, noon and evening there are campus events, information sessions, workshops and tons of other things. It is almost like this campus never goes to bed," said Aseem Malhotra. With the school day starting at 8 a.m., students roll out of bed and make the early morning stroll, or bike ride, to their first class.

"Half the battle for me is to wake up early and catch the R3 Regional Rail Line to get to campus on time before classes begin," said Soumya Rajan. "The other half of the battle is staying awake during class!"

Aside from meeting up for lunch or dinner, students can regularly be seen working out together at the Independence Blue Cross Fitness Center, playing sports at the Pavilion, running around the track at the turf field and playing ping pong and billiards at the Student Activities Center.

A sense of community is formed on campus since so much time is spent with people you know from classes and elsewhere. It is really a beautiful thing to be a part of.

Campus life has truly become a home away from home for many students who have come from different states and even different countries. When students look back at their college years decades from now, at which point they will have jobs and families of their own, they will undoubtedly cherish the many moments and memories they experienced on campus.

Philadelphia offers many educational and cultural experiences. One can enjoy a night of music at the Kimmel Center, which is home to the Philadelphia Orchestra, or stop by the Constitution Center, to see one of the nation's most important documents. Philadelphia sports offer a major reason for students to trek into the heart of the city. Accessible via the Broad Street Line, Lincoln Financial Field, Citizen's Bank Park and the Wachovia Spectrum, are hot spots where students, along with other Philly sports fans, can cheer on their favorite team, and this year, Philadelphia sports teams gave citizen a lot to cheer about, with the Phillies entering the World Series for the second consecutive year, the Eagles rumbling into the end zone frequently and the Flyers keeping fans enthralled in close, nail-biting games.

The city of Philadelphia is definitely the place to be! There are great places to hang out, experience culture, and eat great food! Philadelphia is home to a variety of cultural, historical and social centers, making it the ideal city to be in during college years.

Nirish Hand, Sophomore

Additionally, a college student's life would not be quite complete without a wide variety of food. With restaurants like Boddakan, Penang, Copabarrana and New Delhi, students are able to find food that they have always enjoyed while still being able to experiment with new dishes from different parts of the world. "I thoroughly enjoyed the Chicken Chimichanga I ordered at Copabarrana during a dinner with friends," said Ken Trinh. The city of Philadelphia never fails to offer a fresh plate of new experiences and enjoyment for students with diverse interests.

Fitness Recreation Intramurals

"Getting a good workout as often as I can keeps me alert and awake during classes, along with feeling great for the rest of the day," said Divya Prakriya. Fortunately, Temple provides a variety of options for students to stay fit on campus. Students frequently use the Independence Blue Cross Fitness Center, which is open daily from 6:30 a.m. to 10 p.m., and the Student Pavilion, which is open from 12 p.m. to 10 p.m. The outdoor track at the turf field has also recently become a hot spot for students who want to test their endurance and stamina in an outdoor setting.

In addition to these options, students can join sports clubs and intramurals. Michael Drusedem, sophomore and founder of the Handball Club, said, "It's a great feeling finding a group of people who share a common interest in a sport. It is definitely a bonding experience." Several sports club teams participated in regional and national events.

"For the women's swimming club, we had weekly regular practices and invitationals throughout the year," said Indira Friel.

Though commitment in sports clubs is significant, students who participate find it a healthy and fun addition to their academic workload. Students who do not feel as if they can balance a full school workload with a sports club commitment can take solace in the more flexible, yet considerably competitive, intramural sports available to students.

"Playing intramural volleyball is a great experience for me," said Michelle Link. "I love my TU Ballers!"

HOMECOMING

Temple students take a lot of pride in their school. For example, a Temple student will gladly correct a misinformed outsider that our color is not red, it is cherry. This display of pride is seen most during Homecoming, where fans are covered in an assortment of cherry and white.

The week-long events began with the Homecoming pageant, which allowed the prospective kings and queens to strut their stuff in Mitten Hall's Great Court. In addition, students indulged themselves at the free barbecue sponsored by Main Campus Program Board.

Friday included the afternoon pep rally, held in the Howard Gittis Student Center, the Homecoming Parade and the Lupe Fiasco and Asher Roth concert. The festivities ended with the football game on Saturday, where not even rain could stop dedicated Temple fans, alumni and staff from watching Temple defeat Army 27-13.

The crowd roared to the famous "T for Temple U" fight song that howled through the stands of the stadium. King and Queen Darryn Jarred Lee and Candace Moses smiled through the rain after their Homecoming victory. Yet again, Homecoming remained an event that connects the Temple community.

Music Dance Theater

Traditions are a main component of the many exciting experiences that music, theater, and dance have to offer to Temple students. Providing an outlet for Temple's many talented students, the Boyer College of Music and Dance and the Randall Theater continue to entertain and excite viewers year after year.

The music program includes four choir variations which make up the University Chorale. Also, musical ensembles such as the Diamond Marching Band and the Symphony Orchestra are known for their magnificent performances at sporting events and concerts.

"Being a part of the Diamond Marching Band has been perhaps one of the best experiences I've had in college," said Alex Gonzalez.

The Theater Department embarked on its 42nd year on campus. Performing such masterpieces as "Sweet Charity" and "Shot!" the theater department amazed viewers and left them in awe. With such talent, it is clear that theatrical performers are taught by trained and knowledgeable experts.

The Conwell Dance Theater hosts approximately fifteen performances open to the public throughout the year. In the fall, Kariamu & Company's "Traditions" that demonstrated Kariamu Welsh's dance called Umfundalai (meaning "essence" in Kiswahili), was a cultural hit on campus. Students are also able to take classes in ballroom dancing, Latin dancing, and Indian dancing through Boyer College.

It is a rare occurrence when nothing exciting is going on at or around campus. Many events are organized by the Main Campus Program Board, Temple Student Government, and groups of ambitious, driven students for Temple's lively and energetic student body. Common events that grab students' attention throughout the year including sporting events and information days. In fact, sporting events, such as basketball games, are a popular way for students to get decked out in Chery and White attire and cheer on their home team. Information sessions, including studying abroad fairs, the Marine Recruitment Program, and cancer awareness events engage students' minds and encourage them to explore new areas of interest and concern.

It is very important to think about the gas and emissions that go into your food. It can take up to 30,000 miles to get a bag of Doritos made and transported to Philly. Even 'Philadelphia' Cream Cheese takes 778 miles to get from the factory in Illinois to Philly.

Corinne Miller, Freshman

Another large event this year included Campus Sustainability Day which stressed the importance of on-campus recycling and waste management. The Bell Tower was crowded with many interested students who flocked to the various tables that were set up. Remarking on the importance of "going green", Eric Smith said, "I think sustainability is an important issue today. It basically means trying to meet the needs of current society without compromising the needs of the future. We need to rethink the way we live from many aspects. Awareness is a key part of it."

Another prominent event that occurred in the fall was the appearance of NBC's "Today Show" host Matt Lauer, who came to campus to speak at a charity event at the Joe First Media Center at the School of Communications and Theater. Lauer was honored for his influential work in the field of journalism with the Law Klein Excellence in the Media Award. Students also had the privilege to hear him speak during a symposium about careers in journalism and mass media.

Temple Night Life

When the sun goes down at Temple, it does not necessarily mean that campus shuts down. After dark, campus continues to thrive, proving that there are other options for students at night in addition to studying at the library and writing reports at the Tech Center.

Campus at night is simply popping! You really have to try to be bored here.

Amranga Deyapathy, Sophomore

Walking around campus, one can see the tennis courts at the Student Pavilion filled with students until late into the night.

"Going out to the courts and playing tennis on a Friday night is an ideal way for me to start the weekend!" said Shivani Sheth. In addition to tennis, other sporting events that go on at night include flag football and outdoor soccer games. Friday nights are also host to Free Food Fun Fridays at the Student Center, which lasts from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. The Student Center's game room is also a popular spot for students looking to unwind from the stress of a long day.

Students can also be seen relaxing outside, performing music with friends or kicking around the hackey-sack long after the sun has went down.

"Lacouras Walk really comes to life after dark because of innovative events and usual spots to hang out," said Joshua Houck.

The thrill of going to college comes with the opportunity to live on one's own away from home. Residence Hall Assistants help students ease into this transition by supporting individuals when they need to talk to someone. They also organize many social events to get students together and form a family like bond away from home.

"It is my job to make sure the students in my wing are doing alright and being taken care of," said Resident Assistant Karen Bonnano. Students find it easier to meet new people and make new friends when they keep their room doors open as often as possible. Residence Hall communities become a center where students learn and play together, forming lasting friendships and equally special memories.

Temple University is also a major commuter campus, so the Temple experience would not be complete without hearing commuter's perspectives of college life. Some students also choose to drive to campus, which can be more convenient than taking public transportation. However, driving can result in problems finding available and affordable parking spots on campus.

"If you don't come to campus early enough, you may spend an extra half hour trying to find a place to park your car!" said Sherin Koshy.

Though students have different methods of living and different ways of getting to campus, they all go through the daily hassles and joys that come with college life.

ACADEMICS

“Speak English!” said the Eaglet. “I don’t know the meaning of half those long words, and, what’s more, I don’t believe you do either!”

- Lewis Carroll
Alice’s Adventures in Wonderland, Ch. 3

The lights never go down on Temple’s Main Campus, North Philly’s diamond in the ruff. Temple Center City is exciting with the constant hustle and bustle of the city. The Health and Science Campus houses a brand new building, and Ambler allows students to experience a more suburban lifestyle with the city close by.

In fall of 2008, Temple changed its required classes from Core to the new General Education, or GenEd, curriculum. In this curriculum, students forge connections between their classroom experiences and Philadelphia experiences. While Temple used to require classes such as Human Biology and Dimensions of Racism, we have now opened our eyes to see our city through the looking glass. We can experience a Race and Diversity course, such as Embodying Pluralism, where Ellen Gerdes, a professor with a forte in Chinese dance, teaches students to reflect on their learned knowledge of cultures and put it into dance.

Aside from our new, intriguing courses in and around Philadelphia, Temple Rome and Japan offer life-changing experiences for those interested in seeing the world. Studying abroad gives students the opportunity to encounter the beautiful sights from all over, like this view of Ireland to the left, taken by sophomore Bill Rennie while studying abroad. Additionally, the Career Center provides the knowledge and support needed to land an internship. Temple academics make it all possible, so where will you go?

It is no mistake that the word "diamond" is associated with Temple University. Diamond Street, the Diamond Gems, and Diamond Dollars are only a few of the references made to this precious stone around campus. This glitzy association testifies to the fact that Temple is the diamond of North Philadelphia. What makes Temple so special? What makes this institution so glamorous and unique?

"We get Chinese food from behind bulletproof glass," a student states in response to these questions. "Food trucks present every ethnic food possible, and it's the best food on campus!" another student exclaims. "E-mails are sent to students asking us to act responsibly when the Phillies win! Go Phis!" says yet another enthusiastic Owl. These are only a few of the phrases that Temple students on main campus use to describe TU. The unique world of Temple, which is centered around Broad Street, is the nest for over 20,000 Owls. Additionally, students have the opportunity to 'fly' down to Center City Philadelphia, which is slightly over a mile away.

With an immensely diverse population, many students have found main campus at Temple to be a great place to live, work, and thrive during their college years. While not a traditional college campus, TU has proven its diamond-like qualities just as its founder, Russell H. Conwell, knew it would.

This year, joining the nest are Tyler School of Art students, who are starting their first semester with a building located on Main Campus. The stylish new building is not just for art students though. Tyler students share the modern design with Temple's music students.

"Music and art have always gone together," said transfer vocal performance major Katie Caskey. "Why shouldn't they be together now?" The two are directly next to the School of Communications and Theater, along Norris and 13th Streets.

"Although it was nice to have our own little community at Elkins Park, I enjoy being at main campus because it is closer to the city and the rest of the schools," shares sophomore Tyler student Samantha Varian. "Despite being on Main Campus, my favorite place is still the Tyler building. Simply relaxing outside on our grass is the best!"

Temple's campus in Center City is a student's connection to the heart of Philadelphia. With LOVE Park a block from the school and Independence Hall across the street, all of the essential Philadelphia landmarks are only a few steps away.

The rush and excitement of the surrounding city provides an energetic atmosphere for learning. Students sitting in a classroom or at the computer lab look out the windows toward the city and see an inspiring visual. The lounges on each floor provide ample spots to relax and the outside benches are excellent for studying or munching on a classic Philly cheesesteak. The campus is also home to the Journalism Department's Multimedia Urban Reporting Lab capstone program. Students meet once a week to compile real media stories about various areas of Philadelphia. During the week, they venture out into the city to conduct interviews, investigate story ideas and ultimately produce those stories. TUCC is a multifaceted campus that is ideal for an enriching educational and cultural experience in the middle of one of the greatest metropolitan areas in the country.

Temple Ambler's campus is a student's home away from home. Nestled in the heart of suburban Philadelphia, it reflects the green spaces that surround it and the leading university it is a part of.

Known for its renowned programs in landscape architecture and horticulture, the campus is a live display of students' work. The Healing Garden, Greenroof, and Formal Gardens are maintained almost daily by the students and faculty in the horticultural programs. However, gardening and garden design are not the only career choices offered at Ambler. Many other courses are offered as well. Students can also select from a wide variety of organizations to get involved in such as Student Government, Gamers Anonymous, the student-run radio station, WRFT, as well as the Criminal Justice Society or The Temple Column.

The serene campus is easily accessible by taking the campus shuttle or the short train ride to downtown Ambler. Student life flourishes as individuals in the residence halls interact with commuters. Combined with the easy commute to nearby Philadelphia and the excitement of downtown Ambler, Temple University Ambler has a spirited blend of social and academic benefits to offer any Temple student.

Health Science Center

Temple's health profession students are dedicated. They are so willing to perfect their craft that they practically never leave their school.

"We live here," laughs Ryan Calvin, a third year dental student. "That is our bed," adds Christen Massaro, a fellow third year student, as she points to a couch in the lobby of the Kornberg School of Dentistry. "That's our dining table," referring to a table next to the couch, "and that's our kitchen," she says, gesturing to the Dunkin' Donuts across the street.

Most students at the Health Sciences campus would agree that they came to Temple because they wanted to spend every waking moment working and learning. "To get an A in clinical you have to extract 125 teeth," says Massaro. "At other schools it's less. We want to work. I want to be confident in what I'm doing."

The same applies to Temple's medical students. With the grand opening of the new Medical Education and Research Building, students are able to study in a state-of-the-art center. The new structure, situated on North Broad Street, is directly across from the School of Dentistry and a block away from the School of Pharmacy.

The new building houses more than just a chicly designed study lounge, an expansive library, and the latest in medical education technology, it is also a haven for Temple's medical students. "You never run out of places to study. You never have to leave the building," says second year medical student Gurveen Sandhu. "Before we had to walk to different buildings, now people can stay in one place so it's easier to stay in contact."

Temple Rome and Temple Tokyo are two satellite campuses in exciting parts of the world that offer a global perspective to students of all walks of life.

Just footsteps away from the Spanish Steps and Borghese Gardens, Temple Rome, located in the Villa Caproni, gives students a chance to live and study in one of the world's most ancient cities. With the shadow of the past in sync with the presence of the future, students in Rome take full advantage of all the city has to offer, immersing themselves in the cultura d'italiano.

Students at Temple's Japan campus are also in for a real culture shock. The campus is a mix of Japanese students intrigued by the west, study abroad students and foreigners from all over the globe thrown into a blender. There are few other places in Tokyo where Americans can brag of their anime knowledge in Nihongo tongue to Japanese students who rap freestyle rhymes about their street thug credentials in a country with one of the lowest crime rates in the world.

Both campuses offer Temple students a unique and beneficial experience that puts them a step ahead of their peers and helps to shape character.

Over the time that I have been abroad, I have gotten lost more times than I can count, made lifetime friends, traveled to places I could only imagine when I was young and longed for a school cafeteria more than I'd like to admit.

Since my acceptance to the program, I have been asked a question multiple times: why did I want to go? And it isn't an easy answer. However, it is a chance to explore, learn and attack my world a little bigger. Unfortunately, that answer seemed to evade me until I actually had to leave. Before then, it was just another adventure.

Studying abroad is really the chance of a lifetime and it is more than just filling a passport. It is a chance to stand out. It is one of those final moments in college when you can leave everything behind and start fresh... even if it is just for a semester.

QUIET SIDE STREETS, LIKE THIS ONE, PROVIDE A GREAT OPPORTUNITY TO EXPERIENCE THE EXCITING CULTURE THAT SPAIN HAS TO OFFER.

It took me until the first half of my senior year to decide that I should embrace the opportunity to study abroad in Spain. As the time neared to leave I grew nervous. Would this interrupt my studies at home? Should I be looking for jobs instead? What about subletting my apartment?

However, when the time came to leave, my excitement outweighed these concerns and as I spent more and more time abroad, my misgivings quickly faded away. Since coming to Spain I have experienced more than I ever could have imagined. From biking in the mountains surrounding Granada, Spain, to a 10 day trip through Paris, Amsterdam and Brussels, to making friends with the Spanish owner of a tea shop, I know that I will harbor lifelong memories of this time.

I spent the Fall 2009 semester studying abroad in Paris, France at the American Business School, which was a profound and life altering experience. Upon arriving in Paris, I found myself doing everything possible. They call this the "honeymoon" phase, where in the first few weeks students typically spend most of their budget because they are overcome with excitement. Unfortunately I fell into that trap and it lasted the entire semester. My budget was not limitless; however, by surviving on baguettes and saucisson I was able to ascend to the top of Eiffel Tower and L'Arc de Triomphe, visit the Notre Dame, picnic in the Jardin du Luxembourg, window shop and even go clubbing down the Champs-Élysées, be photographed with L'écoute at Les Halles, sail down La Seine and "smell the roses" at Monet's Gardens. Being in a centrally located country like France allowed me easy travel to London, Amsterdam, Barcelona, Munich, Marrakech, Luxembourg and Geneva. Additionally, I managed to succeed in all four of my upper business classes while meeting great friends, having great times, and experiencing great cultures.

LAUREN GORDON FLASHES A SMILE IN FRONT OF THE ROLLING, GREEN HILLS OF NEWGRANGE BEHIND HER.

I always had a fear that I would never see anything but the East Coast of the United States. In my junior year at Temple, I knew that I was on the cusp of graduating, but a measly six credits were preventing me from walking during graduation in May 2010. Then, I heard about the Temple Dublin summer program, during which I'd get to spend four glorious weeks in a land of lush, green rolling hills. Before I knew it, I was flying across the Atlantic with my boyfriend and I was living and breathing Irish culture. Two wonderful teachers helped to immerse us in the city.

What I fell in love with most was the countryside, despite living in the city of Dublin, I could never describe the scenery that simply engulfs your senses. A genuinely surreal experience was seeing Newgrange, a temple that is more dated than the Egyptian pyramids. I loved the nights spent in Ireland; they were filled with wonderful music, dancing and amazing locals who took us to phenomenal places for drinks and a great time. I felt more like a temporary citizen rather than a tourist because of the Temple classes. To this day, every time I see a movie that shows bits of Ireland, my heart swells, longing for my home away from home.

Honors PROGRAM

This year Temple welcomed the class of 2013, a class that brought with it the best and brightest students in Temple's history, setting new records in both average GPA and SAT scores. Many of these bright students were accepted into Temple's Honors program, with 345 out of the 4,100 freshmen joining the program.

Honors students are required to take six lower-level Honors courses, as well as four upper-level courses. An advantageous program, students are allowed "graduate" level privileges in the library. Honors students also enjoy the luxury of capped class sizes at 25 students and specialized Honors advising. One of the most unique and enjoyable aspects of the program is the opportunity to live in the Honors Living-Learning Community, located in "1300." "I really just think it's a lot of fun living in the same building as all of your classmates," freshman Nhi Tran commented. "It's easy to get help when you need it with homework, and even easier to hang out with all of your friends."

The Honors Activities Board also provides an entertaining outlet for the Honors students, throwing such events as pumpkin decorating and a murder mystery dinner. From Oreo-stacking competitions to Phillies games, the Honors LLC always has something for its residents to do. With a large smile emanating from her Honors dorm room Nhi comments enthusiastically, "I think that if I weren't accepted into Temple Honors, I wouldn't have come to Temple." Sarah Higgins

DINNER...WITH A SIDE OF MURDER

"Your name is Gabby Gunnar and you were a member of your high school band. You know that your former classmate, Sally Beronci had produced the victim's movie but never received any royalties. You must tell her money is not worth killing over."

Every participant in The Honors Activities Board's murder mystery dinner received a card with information similar to this before the high school reunion of Murder High took place in the Howard Gibbs Student Center. Participants were instructed to stay in character, wear '80s costumes, and come with an appetite.

Honors participants were greeted at the door with appetizers and additional information on the murder. They were given $500 each to bribe and blackmail others for information throughout the night. The goal was to correctly identify the murderer by the evening's end. After a night filled with excitement, food and good company, even those who did not correctly identify the murderer left with plenty of fun memories. Gina Swindler

Of the many things that students are not officially required to do during their college careers, studying still remains to be the most important. Yet so many students can be found taking the time out of their busy social and academic schedules to do so.

"I study to prepare for my classes. It helps me keep ahead in the class," comments Anna Berezowska, a senior journalism and history major. "I'm usually at the library taking down notes from the books."

Nearly every nook and cranny of Temple's campus can be used as a study spot. From the obvious places like Paley Library, the Howard Gittis Student Center, the Tech Center and the Tuttleman Computer Lab, students can also be found in places like the Anderson Hall Computer Lab, various lounges in both the Student Center and Tuttleman, as well as at the lawn by the Bell Tower on a nice day. Between classes on the weekdays, students line up to use the computers in the various computer labs across campus in order to catch up on homework or print out papers for class.

Every student finds his or her own perfect place to study and learn. Finding these quiet study moments is critical in every student's life, for it is the time when they can fully focus on their subject of study and take a break from the hectic stresses of the day.

PROFESSOR STEVEN PUSTAY DISCUSSES THE ROLE OF WOMEN IN AN INDOONESIAN CREMATION BURIAL DURING HIS DEATH AND DYING CLASS. PHOTO BY GINA SWINDLER

"I know it's Friday the 13th, but you guys are really acting like zombies!" Professor Steven Pustay quips to his 8 a.m. Death and Dying class. Pustay chooses to teach the class from a world religions perspective. He firmly believes there is a universality to death and works hard to grab the interest of his students by showing them that they are all connected in some way.

The large variety of academics offered at Temple helps students narrow their interests and better understand themselves. Classes like Death and Dying offer an introspective, philosophical spin on learning, while classes like Aikido provide more of a physical and spiritual learning experience. Describing his Aikido class, junior Agin Thomas explained,

"It's not about conflict, it's about using the other person's energy. Aikido is built upon 'key energy.'" The class is unique in that it focuses on working together rather than fighting one person against another. Sensei Yukio Utada, who teaches the class, founded the Aikido Association of North America and opened The Doshinkan Dojo, the first Aikido school in Philadelphia.

No matter the major, classes are not limited to the classroom. Professors are always brainstorming ways to get students out and learning in a hands-on fashion. In The Nature of Crime, professor Sharon Ostrow sends groups out of the classroom to observe and document crime risk on Temple's campus and in the surrounding area. Graduate Professor Sarah Palmer's class, Prop Craft, teaches students how to creatively make a set and props for a theater production.

"We have to find, buy, and make props," sophomore Alex Bjornsson said. "My favorite was when we made fake cotton candy and ice cream!"

From contemplating death to spiritual kinesiology to creating props for a theater production, Temple offers a wide range of classes taught by professors with all types of experiences.

In a big city like Philadelphia, internship opportunities are plentiful. Temple University makes it easy for students to take advantage of these opportunities.

Meg Frankowski is an example of a Temple student who took advantage of one of Temple's local internship opportunities. Her internship gave her the opportunity to have "hands-on" experience in the world of journalism by allowing her to work closely with real journalists at the Philadelphia Daily News.

"This experience was inspiring and gave me insight into the job market that I will have to deal with after graduation," said Meg.

The highlight of her time at the Philadelphia Daily News was the opportunity she received to actually write a news piece for the paper. This gave her the chance to immerse herself in the field and interview people, as well as having the opportunity to get her article published. Ultimately, she was able to do the work of a freelance writer before receiving a college degree.

The internship opportunities available to Temple students are not limited to the area around Philadelphia. There are an abundance of internships that students can pursue that allow them to work in another city during a break period or even an entire semester. Students' opportunities are only limited by their imaginations.

Amy Fuhrmeister had already interned in Philadelphia and dreamed of something different that might involve travel, beaches and fun. She was able to find all of this in one place when she went to Hawaii to intern for the Public Relations Department of the Manoa Valley Theatre Company on the small, yet densely populated, island of Oahu. This experience was perfect for her because she was able to become familiar with a new place without being a tourist, while simultaneously gaining invaluable work experience.

ORGANIZATIONS

"Curiouser and curiouser!"

- Lewis Carroll
Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Ch. 2

There are over 200 student organizations at Temple, all unique and distinct. From Greek life to fashion and culture, there is a place for students to express who they are, what they believe and where they stand during their time spent at Temple.

There are nine types of organizations and various groups within those categories: Academic and Honorary, Cultural/International, Arts & Entertainment, Governance and Political Advocacy, Media/Publication, Recreation/Leisure and Service.

All of these groups are completely student run, non-profit organizations that offer opportunities for leadership, friendship and development. Students are encouraged to add to the already flourishing list of organizations. If students ever feel that an interest or activity is not represented, they are able to create their own club or organization.

Taking part in a student organization is about taking initiative, enriching one's own experience and sharing a passion. Those involved with student organizations at Temple take advantage of the opportunity to advance personal and social development as individuals. Students make their actions matter by seeking out meaningful activities, but also through careful self-reflection.

Ultimately, student organizations let students develop into the person they wish to reflect through the looking glass. Lara Taylor Strayer

THE TEMPLAR STAFF MEETS AS A GROUP ONCE A MONTH TO TALK ABOUT HOW THE BOOK IS DEVELOPING. SECTION EDITORS ARE REQUIRED TO SPEND TWO HOURS WEEK IN THE OFFICE AND STAFF WRITERS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS COME IN FOR ONE HOUR WEEK.

The Templar consists of a dedicated group of students who create the yearbook each year. They build the book from beginning to end. The main goal of the organization is to capture the year at Temple and compile it into a book that students and faculty can take with them wherever they go.

Each section of the yearbook has two section editors that take responsibility for ensuring that the writers/photographers have their work done correctly and in a timely manner. These editors apply the previous year and go through an interview process before being chosen.

The creation of the book begins with assigning writers and photographers to certain events to gather information and photographs for the pages. Then, once all the content is placed on the pages, and the layout is perfected, the editing process begins.

The staff consists of 21 members, so each has the opportunity to leave a large mark on the book by becoming very involved in the creation process. Editor-in-Chief Jared Vanderzell and Assistant Editor Leah Stoner are two of the most dedicated members on the staff; they both work very hard to ensure that the group maintains a level of professionalism that is needed for the book to be a success.

Temple News

The Temple News is the editorially independent, student-run newspaper on campus. Temple News staff members are dedicated students who work hard to produce a professional print publication that serve students, faculty, alumni and the surrounding Philadelphia community. 10,000 copies of their weekly publication can be found on Main Campus, Center City, the Health Sciences Campus and Ambler Campus. In addition to printing weekly, the Temple News updates their website, www.temple-news.com, daily.

In 2009 alone, the paper's staff won eight Keystone Press Awards, and last fall, their website was honored with the 2008 National Online Pacemaker Award.

Temple News is always looking for new writers to add to their award winning publication. They are not specifically looking for journalism students, but prefer to have a diverse group of students with various majors and interests.

Temple Student Government is committed to making positive and open change. They are focused on broadening the scope of TSG, providing additional resources/services to students and expanding the student body's relationship with the local and Philadelphia community.

TSG is an umbrella organization for all students, including those at the graduate level. They embody three branches: Executive, Legislative and Judicial. Senate is used as a forum to pass legislative bills and allows students to voice their concerns about an issue. Because TSG represents the voice of all students, they feel that it is important that students use them as a tool to positively impact life at Temple.

Main Campus Program Board

Main Campus Program Board is the chief student event planning organization on campus. Their mission is to provide enjoyable and unique events for the general student body at Temple. With annual events such as Welcome Week, Homecoming and Spring Fling, MCPB strives to hold events that average 200 or more in attendance. Other events range from laser tag to lectures, from Broadway plays to howling parties and everything in between.

As a student organization, MCPB has much the same elements as professional event planning companies. They have three planning committees: University Events, On-Campus Events and Off-Campus Events, all of which plan various activities. MCPB also has a creative team, a marketing committee and general assembly committee.

Their marketing committee works together to promote MCPB by getting its name out around campus. They display posters and flyers throughout campus to promote the various events that MCPB hosts. Their new creative team combines the creative efforts of those who are interested in making videos, working on the website, writing for MCPB's monthly newsletter, The Focus, and creating the print ads for all events.

Temple Film Collective

Temple Film Collective was founded in the fall of 2008 by a group of freshmen. The club just became a registered organization at Temple this year. TFC is a club for any student interested in film production; it is not restricted to film majors.

"Our goal is to create and complete full productions, solely made by Temple Film Collective members, and premiere these productions at our spring festival," said TFC President, Carmen Emmi.

TFC would like to provide experience to those interested in film while also spreading awareness of the film industry on campus through festivals and film-related events. Their events this year included an informative Q&A with the director and two leads of "Boondock Saints." They also sponsored Reel Terror at the Reel and free screenings of "Psycho" and "The Exorcist." In November, TFC held a Kick-off Festival which showcased members' work, as well as three TFC productions from last year.

NAACP

The Temple chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People does what they can to inform and educate students of color, as well as others, in order to help those of color to advance economically, educationally, socially and politically.

Their goal is to serve as a vehicle for social justice that will stimulate harmonious cooperation with all people, as well as to encourage collaboration between all diverse groups in order to grow leaders of today and tomorrow. In order to accomplish this mission, the NAACP holds events such as an annual health fair, Hip-Hop Vs. America, and sponsors an NAACP week as well as Black Heritage Month.

Ladies of Elegance

Self expression is a way of life. The Ladies of Elegance Association puts these words into action. They are the only non-greek step team recognized by Temple's main campus.

The organization allows young ladies to express themselves through the art of stepping. They do more than simply step, they promote unity. They also remind women that they have an important place in the world. Members have a lot of fun while promoting health as well.

Temple University Ladies of Elegance firmly believe in giving back to the community through community service. Some of the events that LOE has participated in in the past range from volunteering at soup kitchens to performing and being a part of the Muscular Dystrophy and Aids walks.

Through numerous community and university based events, the members of the local chapter of the American Medical Students Association look to fulfill their focus of assisting their members in all endeavors relating to admittance to medical school.

AMSA uses education, peer and faculty support, and any other methods relating to admittance into medical school to help students have the most enjoyable and meaningful undergrad experience.

AMSA also serves the community at large in whatever ways possible. Besides helping with events such as Diva Dade Day, during which they travel to Shriners Hospital to entertain children, the chapter also focuses on taking groups of students to national and regional conventions to help give them insight as well as prepare them for their entrance into medical school.

Esencia Latina

A performance team as well as an educator of Hispanic culture, Esencia Latina performs at various venues on Temple's campus as well as around the tri-state area, exploring and educating others on Hispanic culture through the art of dance.

Through performances, workshops, and a variety of cultural events, Esencia Latina displays their passion for dance and tries to promote Hispanic heritage to Temple students and the surrounding community. Gabriel Katz

Gamma Phi Sigma

Founded on Temple University's campus in 1992, Gamma Phi Sigma Fraternity Inc. seeks to promote Latino and Hispanic cultural education so that it is maintained and passed down to future generations.

Based on the principles of academic excellence, community service, cultural awareness and brotherhood, the "Hermanos Unidos" maintain high academic standards so they can ensure their individual progress in life and serve as role models for younger Latino males.

As a fraternity, they promote and advocate for solidarity as well as develop leadership among Latino males so that they will learn to support and defend one another in all aspects of life. Through programs such as their annual Stroll Show as well as community service events, Gamma Phi Sigma seeks to leave behind a great legacy.

Phi Sigma Pi National Honor Fraternity is a co-educational fraternity which seeks to bring together some of the brightest and most motivated students on campus and work together in a spirit of excellence to encourage their three ideals: leadership, fellowship and scholarship.

Created to help a group of students with high academic standards, Phi Sigma Pi has always intended to fill the gaps between high academic, leadership and social organizations. Because of its structure as neither a simple honor society nor a social fraternity, this organization is certainly unique.

Phi Sigma Pi also helps the community by collaborating with the ROTC to collect supplies for troops overseas, as well as hosting an annual soccer tournament with proceeds going to Autism Speaks.

Active Minds

Active Minds is proud to be the only Temple organization working to utilize student voices to change the conversation about mental health issues on college campuses.

By developing and supporting chapters of student-run mental health awareness, education, and advocacy groups on campuses, the organization works to increase students' awareness of mental health issues, provide information and resources regarding mental health and mental illness, encourage students to seek help as soon as it is needed, and serve as a liaison between students and the mental health community.

Through campus wide events and national programs, Active Minds aims to remove the stigma that surrounds mental health issues, and create a comfortable environment for open conversation about these issues on campuses throughout North America. Past events have included National Day Without Stigma and National Stress Out Day.

Alpha Phi Alpha

Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc. has a rich history, and the men of the Pi Rho chapter do their best to carry out the fraternity's long-lasting traditions.

As the first inter-collegiate Greek letter organization established for African Americans, Alpha Phi Alpha seeks to develop leaders, promote brotherhood and strive for academic excellence, while providing service and advocacy for the community.

At Temple, these goals are carried out through a variety of programs, such as Project Alpha, a program for local middle school children that educates them on sexual health, a voter registration program, and an event where the members of the organization travel to schools in the community to voice the importance of higher education. They also have a scholarship pageant and a Pharos's Ball on campus, featuring dinner and a live jazz band.

Omega Psi Phi

Founded at Temple in 2006, members of Omega Psi Phi live on the cardinal principles of manhood: scholarship, perseverance and uplift.

They hold three big events annually. First, they hold Omega Week in November. Next, they celebrate Women's Appreciation Day, where they have massages as well as hairstylists come in for the women in Temple's community. Lastly, they hold a Langston Hughes poetry night. This event gives aspiring authors, as well as people who need a platform to speak, a chance to showcase their work.

Brothers and Sisters in Christ

Started back in 2006, Brothers and Sisters in Christ tries to keep things simple, or rather, BASIC.

Rarely holding programs besides a small dinner and prayer service at the end of a semester, BASIC Bible Study looks to get back to the basics of the Bible, helping people start or continue their relationship with Jesus Christ. They cater not only to those who are familiar Christianity but also to those who are not, hoping to promote a basic understanding of their beliefs to all.

Temple Ad Club

The Temple Ad Club is an organization that promotes advertising awareness among the students of Temple University. Through education and hands-on experience, they promote the role that advertising plays in everyday life. TAC members compete against other colleges in the National Student Advertising Competition.

"We pride ourselves on bringing advertising related events to Temple students," said TAC President Justin Melnick.

TAC has brought in industry professionals and guest speakers who discuss topics such as cause marketing. They also plan to develop tours and chances to meet with local agency professionals.

"Advertising is more than just something we talk about at meetings, we live it," said Melnick.

Muslim Student Association

What initially started as a group of mainly international students in the late 1960s has developed into a growing organization serving a diverse group of Muslims and non-Muslims alike.

The MSA is always looking for individuals who are willing to contribute to providing a better environment for Muslims to grow in terms of their religion as well as to educate non-Muslims.

Members of MSA believe that students will see their organization as a place to meet new friends, learn more about Islam and ultimately become better individuals, walking away as improved students academically, spiritually and socially.

The organization holds and participates in a variety of events during the year. Some of these events include Islamic Awareness Week, Fast-a-Thon during Ramadan, and Peace Not Prejudice Week.

Haitian Student Organization

Brought to Temple University in 2002 by Diana St. Armand, a woman who felt that the Haitian Culture was under-represented on the Temple campus, HSO was founded with the purpose to promote the culture of the Haitian people, increase its awareness throughout Temple University and the state of Pennsylvania, and to establish a strong positive image of the Haitian People.

They hope to accomplish these goals by holding programs and lectures for educational purposes, holding meetings and social events, and strengthening and extending the system of support to all Haitians locally and in Haiti. HSO hosts a dance showcase annually for diverse dance groups, as well as an annual scholarship donation to Miami Edson Senior High School.

National Council of Negro Women

The Temple chapter of the National Council of Negro Women was founded in 2006 with the mission to develop, lead and advocate for women of African descent as they support their families and communities.

Throughout the year, they participate in three main events. In November, they make holiday cards for the children at St. Jude's hospital who suffer from diabetes. For Christmas, they select a family in need to sponsor for the holiday season. Last year, they adopted a woman and her family where the woman had been a victim of spousal abuse. They raised over $500 to ensure that the family had an enjoyable Christmas. Lastly, every March they have a birthday celebration for the current national president, Dorothy Height, which highlights the strides she has made for NCNW.

XpressionZ

XpressionZ is a non-profit organization that strives to illuminate fashion worldwide by showcasing all of its various components which include design, modeling, photography, cosmetic artistry and hair styling. These components are exhibited in a professional manner, as well as through self-expression.

Fashion is important to members of XpressionZ because it is a means of self-expression. It allows us to show the world who we are, or who we would like to be," said President Kyle Mimms. "The clothes we wear say things about us (intentional or not), even to people we don't talk to directly."

XpressionZ started out as a group of individuals who were strictly interested in breaking into the fashion industry, but now it has opened itself up to individuals interested in all forms of self-expression.

"Our members take pride in expressing themselves through their appearances as well as through who they truly are as individuals, whether that means using channels of dress, art, poetry, dance, song, or any other way of self-expression," said Mimms. "XpressionZ defines who we are as individuals, both externally and internally."

Chosen Generation

Chosen-Generation finds ways to not only study the bible, but to also get to know other believers on campus and build long lasting friendships. While they hold weekly bible studies for those looking to learn more about Jesus Christ, they also hold annual events such as concerts and mission awareness programs to set up a welcoming atmosphere for students to enjoy food, fun and fellowship.

Their concerts feature many diverse musical artists, and their programs have seen hundreds of students give glory to God. While preaching the gospel to unreached Temple University students, Chosen Generation also tries to provide a healthy, challenging and engaging environment for believers to grow in their relationship with the Lord. They seek to supplement rather than replace the role of a local church, and try to point their members to various congregations as their primary source of teaching and community.

They describe their role as specifically to provide an on-campus avenue of evangelism, service and interaction. Starting as a bible study 10 years ago, it has since evolved to include concerts and outings but the vision and purpose remains the same.

SPORTS

Temple University's sports program embodies the passion of the Cherry and White. Temple athletes strive to compete at the peak of their abilities while maintaining strong performance in the classroom. The student body at Temple takes on the enthusiasm of the City of Brotherly Love in that every victory is praised and every loss is seen as a crushing defeat. Temple sports teach not only responsibility and sportsmanship during competition, but also how to be exceptional leaders and individuals off of the field or court as well.

Temple University has a total of 22 sports teams which are comprised of a number of Temple students who work extremely hard to represent TU with honor and pride. Temple athletes embody passion in victory and grace in defeat, traits that are passed down by the excellent coaches here at Temple University.

From Lincoln Financial Field to Geatsey Field and from The Liacouras Center to The Ambler Sports Complex, Temple Owls strive to achieve success in the competitive arena with the help of Temple fans who are behind their teams 100 percent.

As the Owls continue to soar, they elevate their standing on a national level and continue to shine a positive light on Temple sports. Passionate fans, legendary coaches, great venues and dedicated athletes make all Temple sports an absolute honor to watch as multitudes of crowds sing in unison, "Fight, Fight, Fight for the Cherry and the White!"

PUSHING AS MUCH EFFORT AS SHE CAN, FRESHMAN FITZGERALD STICKS A SMOOTH LANDING IN THE LONG JUMP.

Spectators at the 2009 NCAA East Regionals in Fayetteville, Arkansas must have been seeing cherry. Setting a school record, ten members of the men's and women's track and field team attended the competition from June 10-13. Sophomore Paris Williams, junior Carleen Allison, senior Devon DuPont, and sophomore Tashima Stephens, members of the women's 4x400 relay team, took 13th place in the finals. At the A-10 championships a month before, the women earned 4th place.

The Cherry and White will look to continue their success with the addition of a talented freshmen class and under the leadership of head coach Eric Mobley.

Men's Track

The men's track and field team had a strong showing at the 2009 NCAA East Regional, similar to the women's team.

Taking 14th place in the hammer throw, junior Grant West threw 57.36 meters as sophomore Tim Boeni landed in 20th place in the long jump finals. At the A-10 championships a month prior, the men had their best finish yet, taking third overall.

According to Temple Athletics, junior Brad McFadden and freshman Eric Brittingham became the first male Owls since 2005 to earn individual titles. The Philadelphia Inquirer named sophomore Bob Keogh to its Academic All-Area team after throwing a distance of 56.50m in the hammer throw, and simultaneously provided a respectable GPA of 3.56.

The men's track and field team will include seven freshmen in 2010 and will once again look to duplicate their 2009 success under the leadership of head coach Eric Mobley.

A young team boasting only two seniors, Danielle Viens and Nina Oteri, the group is hoping their newly added talent, six freshmen, will add numerous points to the team this year.

Last year, Katie Canning, a sophomore, captured first place in the all-around and vault competitions and tied for second on the floor as well. The fantastic performance earned Canning a first-team All-America honor at the USGA Championships.

BRINGING HIS FLOOR ROUTINE TO AN END, JEFF ZACK DISPLAYS A PERFECT SPLIT.

Plagued with numerous injuries last year that prevented key team members from competing at their expected level, the men's gymnastics team, led by head coach Fred Turoff, hopes to leap into the top three in their conference, especially after ending with a 12-6 record last year.

Co-captain Patrick McLaughlin, the top returning all-arounder, along with talented teammates Chris Mooney, Scott Bloomfield and Jesse Kitzen-Abelson, have set the goal of reaching the NCAA qualifier as a team. While there is plenty of returning talent for the Owls, new additions to the team are also ready to fly the Owls to victory. New members Allen Malone, Alex Tighe and Assaf Zoor will certainly make a difference in close competitions.

"We also want to have at least one event champion in our conference," Coach Turoff said. "My hope for this season is that good health prevails and my men return to conference prominence, with at least one man winning an event."

The team will begin their season with the West Point Open early in January. With a team that will potentially compete through mid-late April, it is always a challenge to stay healthy. However, the Temple Owls will surely rise to the challenge and will fight for the Cherry and White, as well as for their title as champions. Emily Briggs

Women's Tennis

The Temple Women's Tennis team had a slow start to the season, but ended it successfully.

"We have only played a few tournaments, but we won most of the matches," said head coach Steve Mauro.

The two new players, Katarina Mittag and Mellana Cramer, are expected to be great additions to the team as noted by Mauro and Co-captain Christine Clermont. Mauro also expects returning players Theresa Stangl, Lucie Pazderova, and Anastasiia Rukavysnykova to have solid seasons this year. Their most prominent win of the 2009 season was against the University of Pennsylvania, a respected and ranked team, with a 4-3 score.

"I feel that we just wanted it more than they did. All four wins were difficult and required a high level of concentration and effort," said Co-captain Anastasiia Rukavysnykova. The team also dominated Columbia University in a 5-2 battle last year.

"The fact that we have two wins against schools from one of the strongest conferences in the country shows that we can play and be successful against any team," said Rukavysnykova. She credits their win to believing in themselves and giving 100 percent on the court. The team's win against the University of Massachusetts in the 2009 season showed particular player improvement. Temple had lost to UMASS in 2008 but shut them out 7-0 last year. These triumphs culminated in the team winning the #2 seed in the A-10 conference finals for 2009.

"Our season is promising this year, however we will suffer the loss of Elyse Steiner to a torn ACL [for the entire season] and me in the fall to postsurgical rehabilitation for a torn meniscus," said Clermont. Coach Mauro is using the fall season to see where the lineup stands and where they will start in the traditional season. Becky Kerner

Men's Tennis

The Men's Tennis team is off to a great season in 2009. They came out on top in their first tournament of the season, the Navy Invitational. The team was very pleased in their win against Navy, whom Temple head coach Steve Mauro considers a "very strong opponent." Sophomore Mansur Gishkaev considered this win to be of high importance because it was the team's first win against Navy in a long time. Gishkaev partnered with Dmitry Vizhunov to defeat Owen Bullard and Eddie Konrad 8-6. Matt King, Filip Rams and freshman Kacper Rams, a new member to the team and brother to Filip, also pulled through for the team beating out opponents in the singles matches.

The team also had a successful win against Duquesne in early September, again at the Navy Invitational, when Kacper Rams again proved to the team that he was talented. He and Filip Rams teamed up to defeat opponents in an 8-3 battle.

"We have been very happy with the way [Kacper] has been playing," said Coach Mauro. The brothers recently lost a very close doubles match with the University of Virginia, the number four team in the country.

The team put up a tough battle against Marist College at the tournament winning one of three doubles matches, and two of six singles. Gishkaev credited good fitness preparation for his ability to outrun his opponent and in the end win his match.

Coach Mauro expects his three returning sophomores, Mansur Gishkaev, Filip Rams, and Dmitry Vizhunov, to be major contributors to the team come January, when the traditional season begins.

"There is a great connection between players within the team as well as a connection between all the players and the coaches," said Rams.

Women's Softball

The women's softball team finished up their 2009 fall season in an epic fashion: memories were made, for upperclassmen and rookies alike. The Temple Softball team's fall season will not be forgotten.

Victory was theirs when they won the Pool A Championship, at Pride College. The Owls showed Lafayette and Siena who was boss by posting 9-4 and 5-2 victories. Unforgettable moments were made when freshman Ali Robinson went 3-3 and senior Krystle Metzler went 2-2. To conclude, they posted a final score of 5-3. The Owls, who posted a 15-25 record during the 2009 season, kicked off their 2010 campaign against at the Georgia State Panther Invitational against East Tennessee State.

The Cherry and White were led by a class of three seniors, catcher Krystal Metzler, infielder Michelle Lerner, and shortstop Danielle Fagan. The Owls are led by the excellent coaching of the Philadelphia Force's assistant coach, Joe Dipietro.

Templar spoke with Rob Valli, the coach for Temple University's baseball team. Valli highlighted particularly important moments from the 2009 season, especially for player Sean Barksdale, who was All Conference, Big 5, All ECAC and selected by the Houston Astros. Valli commented on how he has personally seen the team grow over the past season. "The character our team showed was incredible, especially by remaining competitive throughout the season despite losing our top 2 pitchers to season-ending injuries," said Valli. Three of the most memorable moments were sweeping a 3 game series with Big 5 rival LaSalle, sweeping a 3 game series with in-state rival Duquesne and winning the opening weekend tournament at Florida Gulf Coast.

The baseball team finished last season with an overall record of 17-33 and will seek to improve upon that showing in 2010. The Cherry and White will look to gain this improvement under coach Rob Valli and with the leadership of their six seniors, Pitcher Matt Blackburn, 2B/3B Tony Jusino, Pitcher, Mike Click, Pitcher Kyle Monahan, C/OF Ryan Ferguson, and Pitcher Ryan Thomas as well as graduate senior, P Matt Mongiardini.

The Temple Lacrosse team entered the 2010 season longing to gain redemption for their 4-12 overall record in 2009, a stark contrast to their impressive 2008 season.

The team started the 2009 season with ten consecutive losses, but fought hard throughout the entire campaign. The team ended the 2009 season with a 15-5 victory over city rival LaSalle and was looking to ride that wave of momentum into the 2010 season.

The Temple Lacrosse team is coached by Bonnie Rosen, who in her second year leading the Owls in 2008, led the team to the Atlantic 10 title and a NCAA tournament appearance, and assistant coach Nicole Moore. The Owls once again look to return to that level under Rosen's leaderships.

The Owls are led by four seniors, Midfielder Chelsea Rosiek, Goalkeeper Jessica Colucci, Defenseman Tracy Zimmer, and Midfielder Lindsey Colferai. These four Owls, along with their teammates, will lead the task of trying to get the Cherry and White back on track. The team's 4-12 record during the 2009 season will without a doubt fuel the Owls 2010 effort and will strengthen their quest to return back to the top of The Atlantic 10.

Golf

The 2009-2010 Temple Golf team will look to replicate strong performances from over the last few seasons. Strong and dedicated coaching coupled with talented and willing golfers has provided Temple with a golf team capable of being a force to reckon with on the course.

Temple's golf team is lead by Coach Brian Quinn. Quinn was a four year letter winner at Temple University from 1987 to 1990. Quinn has also played professional golf on a number of professional tours and is director of instruction at the BQ Golf Academy in Conshohocken, PA. Last season under Quinn's tutelage, the Cherry and White captured the Big Five Title by a single stroke and look to once again return to that winning form.

The Owls are led by senior Eric Plisko who earned a spot on the PING All-Northeast Regional Team in the spring of 2009 due to his strong performance. Plisko's scoring average has dropped every year that he has teed it up for the Cherry and White.

Although the fall 2009 campaign was characterized by a 13th place finish at the Big 5 invitational the Owls will not hang their heads. The team will look to return to the top of the Big 5 down the road.

Fencing

Coming off an impressive season last year, the Temple Fencing team, under the leadership of Hall of Fame Coach Nikki Franke, entered this year looking to add to their success.

The Owls finished the 2008-2009 season with an 8th place finish among women's teams at the 2009 NCAA National Championships and a top ten ranking throughout the year.

"With the addition of a couple of new faces and the return of a strong core, this team is looking for great things" said the team's Assistant Coach Bradley Baker. The Owl's personal goal for 2009-2010 season is to attain a top 5 national ranking.

The Temple Fencing team is led by team Captain Kristen Howell and weapon Captains, junior Audrey Barroso (sabre) and senior Melissa Parker (foil). The 2009-2010 campaign got underway with the 30th annual Temple Open. Sophomore Alyssa Lumasio and senior Melissa Parker placed 1st and 2nd respectively in the foil while senior Kristen Howell and junior Grace Wu tied for third in epee. Sophomore Kamali Thompson placed 3rd in the sabre.

The strong start to the season was a great sign for the Temple Fencing team and illustrated the passion that the team had to continue their impressive play. The tight-knit group is very confident that their overall ability and hard work lead them to reproduce and hopefully better their impressive 2008-2009 season again for years to come.

Off the field she is always doing the little things to bring the team and our players together; whether it is buying a birthday cake or making a sign to put on doors the first away trip. She will be hard to replace and we'll miss her!" said Jones.

The Owls will look to fly high and once again return to prominence with their young returning core in 2010.

The women's soccer team completed the 2009 season with an overall record of 7-11-1 and a conference record of 3-8-0. Although the team's effort is not evident through its record, it was absolutely evident through its play.

"The best example of what our team is capable of doing was evident in our game vs. Duquesne. We had lost 4 games in a row by the exact score of 1-2 and had decided before this game we were not going to lose by that score again. We went down 0-2 early in the game and then came back to win in the last five minutes 3-2. We showed resilience and determination that will carry forward," said Head Coach David Jones.

Hopefully those Owls will carry forward those attributes which allowed the team to conclude the season with two consecutive 1-0 victories accompanied by game winning goals by freshman forward Kate Yurkovic and sophomore midfielder Tiia Kuokka. The team will return in full force in 2010, but Coach Jones admits that they will be at a loss without senior defenseman Carly Metzger.

Noone. The seven seniors led the Cherry and White to a 9-7-2 overall record on the season and a 4-4-1 conference record.

Although the Owls did not compete in postseason play, the team had its share of accomplishments. Senior J.T. Noone was named to the Academic All-Conference team (3.68 GPA) and the All Conference first team for the second consecutive season.

The Owls finished the 2008 campaign with a 13-6-3 record and a runner-up finish at the Atlantic 10 Tournament. Although the 2009 season did not live up to that level, the Cherry and White fought hard every time they took the field. The Owls will look to take a step forward and return to postseason play next season under Head Coach David MacWilliams.

On November 15, 2009, the women's crew team turned in a strong performance at the Braxton Memorial Regatta on the Schuylkill River. However, a blizzard engulfed the Philadelphia region on the week of February 8, and the tent that housed four boats on Boathouse Row collapsed. Setting the team back for the spring, they hope to train indoors until they can get back in the water. CBS3 estimated the damage caused by the collapse at $175,000.

The Lady Owls were competing well in the fall season up until that point. At the Braxton Memorial Regatta, they won three races and placed second in two races overall. The Varsity 4A and 4B boats won each of their races, triumphing over competitors such as UMBC, Philadelphia University, Binghamton and Stony Brook.

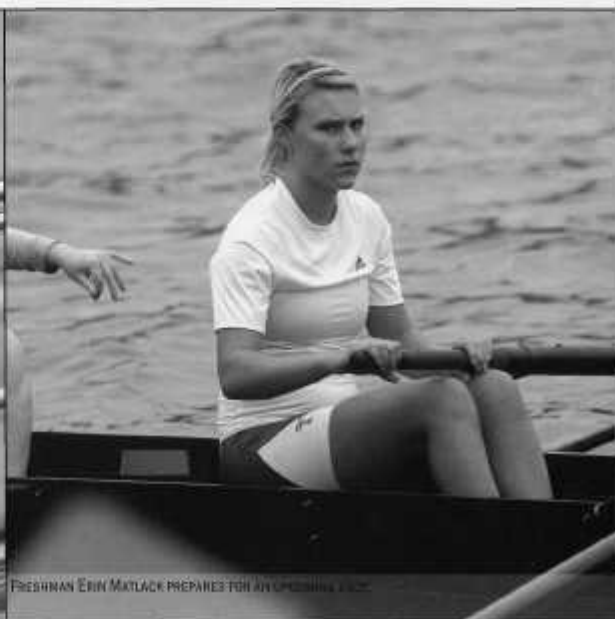

At the Frostbite Regatta in Camden, NJ, the Owls turned in promising second-place finishes. Regarding the Frostbite Regatta, Coach Tim Hagan commented to owlsports.com, "It was a good showing today. I was very pleased with our performance. Both the V8 and JV8 had very strong rows and hung close to the leaders, but just couldn't find a way to get through them at the end of the races."

The Owls look to pick up their season again in March at the Keuper Cup in Melbourne, Florida and culminate their season in May with the prestigious Dad Vail Regatta on the banks of the Schuylkill.

White has an extensive resume which includes winning excellence for Temple in the Dad Vail Regatta and an Olympic coaching appearance during the 2000 Sydney games.

White was honored with the 2009 Lifetime Achievement Award at the 17th Annual Joy of Sculling Conference. Clearly, this is a testament to the excellent program he has built at Temple.

The Temple University Men's Crew program took to the water in search of a successful 2009-2010 season. The team returned a number of their top rowers from the year before. The Owls opened up the 2009 fall season on the Schuylkill River at the Navy Day Regatta on October 10, 2009.

James Barr, Scott Waters, Jason Cartwright, Nenad Ninkovic, Patrick Curran, Brendan Cunningham, Thomas Masterson, John Masterson and Don Norris made up the Varsity 8 on that day and finished in fourth place behind Navy, Penn and Drexel. Also that day, the Junior Varsity 8 finished third while the Collegiate 4+ finished in 10th place. The exhibition was a strong showing for Temple's team. The Owls built on their strong showing a few weeks later at the Schuylkill Regatta where the Frosh 4+, comprised of rowers Rob Nave, Mike Marinella, Kevin Nally, Majiec Grudzien and Rich Ehmer, won gold by over 40 seconds.

Following the Owls strong performance at the Princeton Chase, it was clear that the Owls were one of the region's top crew programs. Temple continued to prove this on November 14th when they competed in the Frostbite Regatta held on the Cooper River in Camden, NJ.

Field Hockey

The Temple Field Hockey team finished the 2009 season with an appearance in the A-10 championship game against Richmond. Although the Owls did not bring home the title, it does not diminish their fantastic season. They had a stellar conference record at 4-2 which included wins over the eventual A-10 champs, the Richmond Spiders, and over the previous year's champs, Massachusetts. That game culminated with a game-winning goal by senior Kate Stewart, the first goal of her career. When asked about the game, head coach Amanda Janney said, "That win was in the making since last year, as we lost to UMass the year before in triple overtime."

Temple was led by a strong senior core that took Temple all the way to the A-10 title game. When asked about their leadership, Coach Janney stated, "Each of the 6 seniors played a significant part to different wins throughout the year. Charise Young and the twins, Kasey and Mandi [Ruth], were the team's offensive threats. Seniors Kate Stewart, Kristen Wanner and Kimmi Hanshew were the work horses in our backfield. Each of the 6 dedicated themselves to our team and gave their full commitment to our program each and every day."

An extremely talented returning player for next season is sophomore Bridget Settles. Settles was a dominant scoring threat this past season and when asked about Settles' future, Janney stated, "Bridget is a killer forward and she is still developing her skills and her potential. She has great creativity to score in a variety of ways. I am glad that she had a breakthrough scoring season as a sophomore and I know that she will continue to improve and set up game winning goals when we need them."

There is no doubt that with a strong returning group and great leadership from the coach, the 2010 team has the potential to achieve their ultimate goal, which is to win it all.

International track star Steve Prefontaine once said, "A lot of people run a race to see who's the fastest. I run to see who has the most guts."

During the 2009 cross country season, the Lady Owls flew to new heights and certainly showed guts. The team traveled to Maryland in late fall to make their first appearance as competitors in the NCAA Regional Championships. Junior Rebecca Mims led the team during their debut. Her fellow teammates, freshman Diedre MacFarland and sophomore Eva Sepulveda, helped lead the team to their 24th place finish. Coach Eric Mobley commented on the victory by saying, "The results today [at the championships] were huge for our program."

The 2010 season looks equally promising for Temple. The young team that had no seniors this year will be back for a bigger and better season next year, with the hope of a couple of strong additions.

The Temple University men's cross-country team had a record-setting season, culminating with a decisive university section title at the IC4A Championships in late November. Held in the Bronx neighborhood of New York City, the Owls were led by four finishers in the Top 25. Rounding out the top runners were juniors Eddie Penetar, who came in second place, and Mike May, who finished third, sophomore Travis Mahoney, who came in sixth, and senior Adin Mickle, who finished in twenty-fifth place.

The team previously finished in ninth place overall at the NCAA Regional Championships. Coach Eric Mobley told owlsports.com, "The results of today's meet were huge for our program. This caps off a really great season for both of our [men's and women's] teams."

The Atlantic-10 Championships in St. Louis also proved to be a huge success for Temple, as they finished fifth. Junior Mike May quickly became the first All-Conference honoree in program history, finishing in eighth place. Another achievement for the Owls this season came when the team earned an 11th place ranking from the U.S. Track and Field Cross Country Coaches Association Mid-Atlantic Region, the best ranking in school history.

Although still in progress when the book went to print, the 2009-2010 season for the women's basketball team is looking promising. Their overall record thus far is 19-6, and 8-2 for conference games. At this point, the team is very close to earning their seventh consecutive NCAA tournament berth.

The team is proud of their big win against Rutgers in early December because of Rutgers' reputation of greatness. "Winning at the RAC [The Louis Brown Athletic Center] says a lot about our team," says Marli Bennett. She also mentions the team's win in their season opener against Illinois, saying, "We were down 18 towards the end of the game and we banded together as a team, determined that a loss would not start our season, and came up with a win."

The Owls also played close games against Duke and Florida State, both top-10 teams, earlier in the season. Sophomore co-captain Kristen McCarthy has been a high scorer this season and has helped lead the way for Temple. Senior co-captain LaKeisha Eaddy became the 17th player in the history of Temple's program to score 1,000 career points. Tonya Cardoza, second-year head coach, has helped put the team in a capable position to vie for an A-10 title, taking them to the NCAA Tournament.

Bennett and McCarthy agree that their goal this season is to win the Atlantic 10 Championship and play each game with passion and heart.

The Temple volleyball team had a very successful 2009-2010 season, ending with an overall record of 14-12. "We had a lot of great wins in the fall, where we came back and won after being down 2-0," said junior Ariel Pierre.

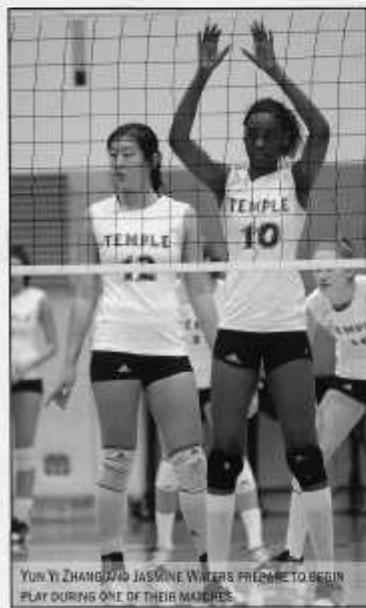

One of the team's most notable wins came at the end of the season at the nail-biting game against George Washington. Temple won 3-2. "I think that [this win] was huge because it went to five games and put us into the semifinals of our conference championship," said senior Jacklyn Morrison.

The Owls' season ended at their next match against the A-10 regular season champion, Dayton, where the Owls lost 1-3. Pierre gives the team credit for putting up a good fight against Dayton, noting how well they competed against them as well as St. Louis, both of which are top teams in their conference.

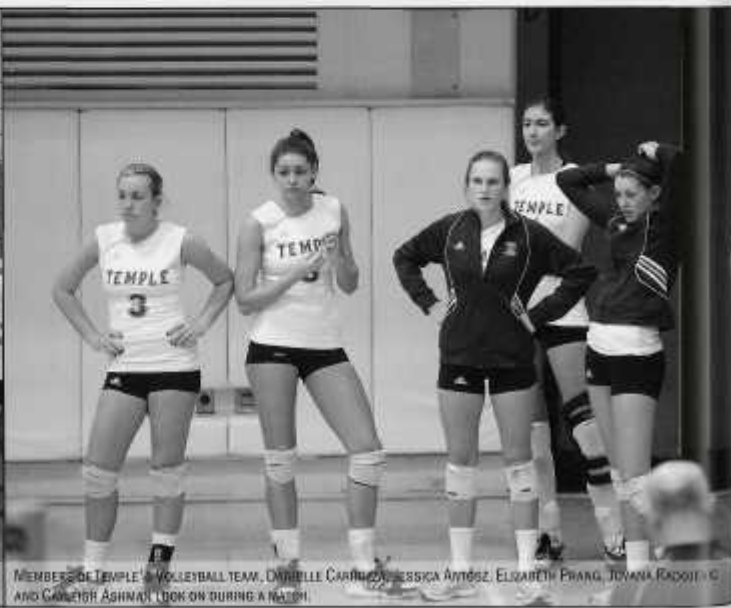

Four of Temple's team members were honored with postseason recognition awards this year. Senior Yun Yi Zhang received the highest honor, earning first team honors. This is Zhang's third time receiving a postseason award, but her first time receiving this level of recognition. Freshman Jasmine Waters was named to the All-Rookie Team. "[She] has definitely shown the most improvement from last year to this year," said Morrison.

The Owls also voted on awards as a team, which were given out at the end-of-season banquet. Jasmine Waters was awarded Most Improved for the 2009 season and Yun Yi Zhang was voted MVP. Jessica Antosz and Elizabeth Prang each won the Coaches Award and Jacklyn Morrison received spirit and academic awards.

TEMPLE SENIOR RYAN BROOKS TAKES A QUICK BREATHER AS THE OWLS TAKE ON AN OPPONENT AT THE LIAISON CENTER.

By far, the most memorable victory for the 2010 men's basketball team was their rewarding win over Philly Big-5 rival, the Villanova Wildcats. The Owls soared to a convincing 10-point lead at the final buzzer, concluding their first game and win against a top five team.

The win launched Temple into a top 20 national ranking. Sophomore Juan Fernandez from Rio Tecero, Argentina, a key player for the Owls, has been a difference-maker in many close games. Other big wins in the 2010 season came at home against the Penn State Nittany Lions, with a score of 45-43, and Big 5 rival Saint Joseph's Hawks, with a score of 73-46.

However, a few tough losses plagued the Owls in their road games. Losses to the University of North Carolina Charlotte (64-74) and the University of Richmond (54-71) have left the Temple Owls in question regarding a back-to-back win of the Atlantic-10 conference and an automatic birth into March Madness. At the time of press, the Owls still boasted an impressive 20-5 overall record. Seniors Luis Guzman and Ryan Brooks have shown excellent leadership, while taking the team to their current standing of number 21 in the nation. (Rankings are based on the time of press.)

The 2009 Temple Owls Football Team will be remembered as one of the most successful teams in university history. The team finished the year with an overall record of 9-4 (second most wins in Temple history) and a 7-1 conference record, en route to becoming the 2009 CO-MAC EAST Champions. The season included an incredible team record, a nine game winning streak and a stellar home record of 5-1. The season ended with the Owls' first bowl appearance when they took on the UCLA Bruins in the EagleBank Bowl in Washington, DC.

The 2009 team was led by fourth year head coach Al Golden. As well as leading the Owls through a great season, Golden was also named the 2009 Maxwell Club Tri State Coach of the year. Freshman RB Bernard Pierce, who boasted a fantastic first season for the Owls, was named to the Honorable Mention All-College Football Insiders Team along with teammate Colin Madison, a junior OL. Pierce was also an honorable mention All-American.

Madison, one of the members of the offensive line, was a first team All-Mac honoree and was the team's Co-offensive MVP starting all 13 games at RG. TE Steve Maneri and DB Dominique Harris, both of whom Coach Golden regarded as exceptional leaders, were selected to the MAC's All-Academic team.

The accolades, the record and the bowl appearance speak for themselves. Temple had a fantastic season and the team is seeking bigger and better things for the future. When asked about how it feels to coach Temple's most successful team in 30 years, Coach Golden remarked, "It feels like we are making progress, but that's all. We didn't come here to have one winning season. I'm afraid many on the outside think we have arrived. That mindset is fool's gold. We have a long way to go, on and off the field, to build the type of infrastructure congruent with winning organizations. Numerous teams can have a successful season, yet it requires many years of successful seasons to build a strong program. We are trying to build an enduring program and one that will ultimately compete for championships annually." After this past season, there is no doubt that the Owls have the talent to do just that.

Clubs

Recreational sports allow students to participate in clubs of their interest on a leisurely and competitive basis. Currently, the Campus Recreational Department offers 26 sports for Temple University students to join, each with numerous benefits and outlets. While some groups such as the Equestrian Club compete in the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association, others such as the Indoor Rock Climbing Club are non-competitive. Most clubs are open to all students, faculty and staff, providing a unique opportunity for all those involved. Club teams often travel to other universities to compete in intercollegiate athletics. For instance, the roller hockey team competes with Division II colleges all along the eastern seaboard. The university offers a diverse assortment of club sports to choose from, including ice hockey, badminton, fencing, handball, powerlifting, soccer, swimming, tae kwon do and numerous others.

Diamond Gems

Temple's Diamond Gems Dance Team is an essential part of the Spirit Squad at the university. They help to cheer on players and energize crowds at football, basketball and volleyball games. The team performs at all home games for football and basketball and sometimes travels to nearby schools to continue to cheer on the Owls.

The team practices three times a week during their season, which runs from mid-summer through the spring semester. Choreography is taught by head coach Megan Teesdale and captains Alyssa Spangler and Stefanie McCaffrey.

Aside from dancing at the games for the Temple Athletic teams, the Diamond Gems also involve themselves in many community events throughout the season.

There are 14 girls on the team this season. The Diamond Gems will be losing seniors Alyssa Spangler and Jillian Becker at the end of the 2009-2010 season.

The Diamond Gems have exhibited excellent accomplishments during their recent seasons. Notably, during the 2008-2009 season, Jillian Becker, Alyssa Spangler and Stefanie McCaffrey were asked to perform at Game 4 of the World Series. This year, the team is very excited about qualifying for and having the opportunity to compete in their first national championship, the UDA Collegiate National Championship.

Head Coach Megan Teesdale says the things that the team most looks forward to throughout the season are "supporting the teams at Temple University and competing against St. Joes!"

The cheerleading team at Temple University plays an enormous role in generating spirit at TU. Between games and practices, their season runs from all year long. This year, the team has 35 members, two Head Coaches, Matt Echevarria and Emily Burster, and Assistant Coach Nicole Moore.

During the 2009-2010 season, the team cheered at various games, including those against Army and Navy, and also went to the EagleBank Bowl game in Washington, D.C.

In addition to preparing for and attending Temple athletic games, the team is also involved with many community events. This season, they have volunteered at the walk for the Children's Hospital of Pennsylvania and the Temple breast cancer game.

Head coach Matt Echevarria says that the program has grown tremendously over the last few years, adding that "This year's team is extremely talented and each member contributes to the program in some way."

Recently, the team has enjoyed establishing annual traditions. For the past two years, the cheerleaders have been attending a local camp at the start of the season, which acts as one of the team's first bonding experiences and gives them a chance to gauge how they work together.

Co-Head Coach Matt Echevarria says, "The character and diversity of the program and each cheerleader is the greatest part of this team. It's always an interesting day at cheerleading practice or wherever we go, and it's always a brand new learning experience."

The Diamond Marching Band consists of students from all areas of Temple, from novice freshmen to the elder seniors. Although the Diamond Band has quite frequently made its way up and down Broad Street, the group also traveled outside the city this year. Their talent traveled down to Annapolis, Maryland when the Temple football team competed against the Midshipmen of Navy.

Another patriotic trip was in store for the band as the football team was selected to play against UCLA in the EagleBank bowl game, held in Washington D.C.

The pride of the Cherry and White has become a tradition whose end is nowhere in sight. With new members joining every year, the spirit of Temple University is sure to be displayed in its fullest potential by the Diamond Band.

FACULTY

"I daresay you haven't had much practice," said the Queen. "When I was your age, I always did it for half-an-hour a day. Why, sometimes I've believed as many as six impossible things before breakfast."

- Lewis Carroll, Through the Looking-Glass, and What Alice Found There, Ch. 5

What would peanut butter be without jelly? Romeo without Juliet? TU without its outstanding faculty? If one of these were to exist without the other, a very important half would be missing - an irreplaceable half that helps to comprise the whole.

Temple University's faculty aides students in numerous ways, both on a local and national level. Staff members such as Michael Boufidel, Professor and Department Chairman of Civil Engineering, helped inform engineering students all over the nation when his study of the biodegradation of oil concentrations was published in National Geoscience in January of 2010.

Another outstanding faculty member includes Physics Professor C.J. Martoff who is to be included on a mission into outer space with a NASA crew in an effort to study the polarization of x-rays from black holes. As part of NASA's Small Explorer Program, the mission will occur sometime between 2012 and 2015. Even past leaders in the Temple community are praised for their contributions to the community. Polett Walk, formally known as Berks Mall, was renamed in January to honor longtime member and former chairman of the board, Daniel Polett. He was awarded both the Acres of Diamonds Award and the Russell Conwell Award for his involvement with the governing bodies of Temple.

Temple's faculty, whether through trips to space or studies on biodegradation, continue to make the university a thriving school. Without the perfect duo of faculty and students, there would not only be no future for the students at Temple, but no future for Temple as a university. The faculty is the cherry to the white in an institution that continues to grow with each passing day.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

What originally drew you to Temple, the university plopped right in the middle of North Philadelphia?

My decision to come to Temple was reached in large part because I believe in Temple's long honored pledge to provide access and opportunity to dedicated students who wish to build a better life. My own life is an example of the impact that access to a great research university can have. I, too, set out to create something more from the gifts and opportunities bestowed on me. However, if I had not had access to a great urban public research university in my home city, University of Utah in Salt Lake City in my case, where I earned my bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees while raising our four daughters with my husband Randy, I would not be where I am today. I value Temple's role in Philadelphia and the region. I believe in the University's tradition of access and excellence, and in maintaining Temple's momentum as we continue our push to be a leader among national urban research universities.

How does it feel to be the first female president?

I am keenly aware that in the news release announcing my appointment as Temple's new president back in 2006 and in every news story that followed, and almost every time someone introduces me at an event, I am referred to as "the first female president" of Temple University.

I certainly did not set out to be the "first female" to do anything. I set out to have a fulfilling life, to follow my passion, to do meaningful things, big and small, in my professional life and in my personal life. That has not always been easy, and it has required balancing priorities and making tough choices, but so far it has worked out for me. I also do not think that my personal and professional goals are particularly unique. Leaders that I admire, both men and women, seem to have had similar desires for meaning, fulfillment and to do something they are passionate about.

This spring, your first freshman class will be graduating: how does that make you feel?

I suppose I feel a little like the seniors in wondering where the time went. It seemed to go by so quickly! I am so proud to see how much the Class of 2010 has achieved and how each member of the class has taken advantage of the many opportunities Temple offered them. I am even more gratified by what they have given back to the Temple community in their leadership, service and spirit and how they leave Temple a stronger, more energized institution. In this way, our graduating students are following in the footsteps of every class before them. I invite them to continue to be as involved and committed to Temple as alumni, and I look forward to working with them for many years to come.

Do you plan on making any improvements?

As we look to the future, we know that we have many other pressing needs to improve our infrastructure and campus. This year we demolished the University Services Building at Broad and Oxford streets. In its place, we plan to construct a student residential complex. In addition to providing a much-needed southern gateway to the Temple campus, the facility will include retail, dining and entertainment amenities for the campus and surrounding community. We also began work on important renovations to the Pearson-McGonigle complex. When complete, this work will create exceptional new opportunities for student recreation.

These projects constitute the first steps in the ambitious Temple 20/20 plan, a comprehensive framework for the development of our Main Campus over the next several years. Temple 20/20 is designed to ensure that Temple provides its students and faculty with the resources and facilities of a 21st century learning environment that supports academic, research and expanded programming to engage our local community.

The plan envisions new and refurbished buildings along the Broad Street corridor and in the heart of campus, and will establish Temple as a premier destination for academics, research activity, commerce and cultural events. While several of the projects included in the Temple 20/20 plan will be completed after current students have graduated, as alumni they will reap the benefits that these facilities will bring to Temple's growing reputation long after they have earned their degrees.

Do you think most students enjoy coming to Temple?

I am always impressed by the excitement and enthusiasm that Temple students express to me, beginning on Move-In Day and extending even beyond their graduation when they become alumni. I think it is the vast array of opportunities our large institution offers, as well as the many benefits of being in Philadelphia. What seems to make the greatest impact is the relationships students develop with one another and the rewarding times they share in studying and working together, supporting our sports teams, engaging in community service, traveling abroad, and just spending time with other students from across the state and from around the nation and the world. These are the most memorable things about college life that Temple alumni treasure throughout their lives.

What do you think about the Temple Football team going to the Bowl this year? Did you ever imagine it when you started?

I am delighted that the team's hard work resulted in an outstanding season and Temple's first bowl appearance in 30 years. Shortly afterward, our men's basketball team surged into the national rankings with strong play and key wins against conference and non-conference rivals. We can be very proud of all the young men and women who represent Temple in athletic competition in the many sports programs we support. It takes a great deal of talent and even more commitment to practice to compete in intercollegiate athletics, especially while balancing a demanding academic schedule.

'I could tell you my adventures—beginning from this morning,' said Alice a little timidly; 'but it's no use going back to yesterday, because I was a different person then.'

— Lewis Carroll
Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Ch. 10

The anticipation of graduation in May, the itching notion to finish classes, the thrill of being wise upperclassmen, and the finale of a college career all weigh heavily on the minds of any departing senior.

Temple University's class of 2010 will undoubtedly face challenges as they plow through the world that awaits them, yet with an unmistakable set of learned skills, these students are well prepared for every test thrown their way. This class featured 6,700 of the most competitive students ever to enter the university.

Some of this year's most popular majors included biology, psychology and accounting, reflecting jobs that will thrive in the economy. The Fox School of Business was proud to teach students such as Katharine Hamed, a human resources major, who will enter the corporate realm as an executive with Target thanks to a unique partnership between the store and the school. Others, such as Claire Fuller, a communications major, impressed the judges on American Idol and earned the coveted golden ticket. Still others, like men's basketball starter Ryan Brooks, became the 45th member of the 1000-pt. club.

As seniors, these students will take with them countless lessons and memories, building their lives upon the foundation that the university has provided them.

What is one thing you did not expect to learn while at Temple?

Living in the dorms, I learned that it's a lot easier to burn popcorn in a microwave than one would think.

Where was your favorite place to go on campus or in Philadelphia?

It doesn't get much better than the 24-hour Starbucks in the Tech Center at 3 a.m., during finals week.

What has been your most memorable experience here at Temple?

My fall 2008 semester at Temple Rome was an amazing experience. It was a once in a lifetime experience, and I'll have those memories forever. Summer 2009 Archaeological Field School at Valley Forge is a close second!

What is the most important lesson you have learned about yourself?

I learned that unlike high school, college was a decision I made for myself to work hard for something I really wanted. No one was going to come checking up on me to make sure I was doing all my work. Once I realized that, it was a lot easier to expect the best from myself.

What is one thing you did not expect to learn at Temple?

Looking back on my years here at school, I never expected to learn so much about myself. Being outgoing and connecting with people who share the same interests as me has been an invaluable tool for discovering who I am as a person. In fact, being outgoing and exploring my life led to my most memorable experience - studying abroad in Rome. It was an amazing time and I wish I was back in that city every day. The most important lesson from school came from my time there as well: time seems to go by faster every day, so make the most of life while you still can.

Four years ago, could you have guessed you would be doing what you are now?

Four years ago, I started college as an international business and marketing major and now am in the School of Communications. I thought I had my life figured out, but it took some real experience and hard work to figure out what I really wanted to do in life.

What is the most important lesson that you have learned about yourself?

I learned that no matter where you go to college, across the board we are all learning the same things. When I reconnected with friends from home who were at Ivy League colleges, I realized we were learning the same concepts and information in our respective classes. I learned that no matter which college you attend, if you work hard to learn the material and build good relationships with your professors, you are just as smart and competitive as the next college student. You make your college experience what it is.

What has been your most memorable experience?

My most memorable experience at Temple has been teaching yoga at the IBC. It's a lot of fun leading yoga sessions and it feels good knowing I've helped people meet their fitness goals. I've learned what a capable person I am at balancing a heavy course load, teaching at the IBC, and working part time as well. And I've learned how to best utilize my time on the regional rail!

Reflecting on your years at Temple, what is one thing you did not expect to learn?

I didn't expect to become so comfortable with the city of Philadelphia. I'm a self-proessed country girl and cities used to give me anxiety, it feels empowering and freeing to be so familiar and knowledgeable of Philly now.

Job-wise, what are you going to do after you graduate?

I'm still figuring that out. I need to get an internship going on and start concentrating on networking more. I'm open to any and all career possibilities, but I'm especially drawn to management positions that include media and traveling!

Where do you see yourself five years from now?

I see myself as a successful career woman, living on her own, with money in the bank and tons of opportunities before her.

What is the most important lesson you have learned about yourself?

I've learned that I have to always look forward and never dwell on things that I have no control over. I cannot change the past, but I can act in the present to change the future.

What has been your most memorable experience here at Temple?

The fall of 2008 was by far my most memorable semester at Temple. Walking to City Hall when the Phillies won the World Series and when Obama was elected president were two of the most unique experiences of my life.

What were your leadership positions and how did they shape your life at Temple?

I was the Treasurer in the 1300 Bonate during my freshman year, Director of Outreach in the Residence Hall Association during my sophomore year, Co-chair of the International Health & Health Policy Committee for the American Medical Student Association during my junior year, and Secretary of the American Medical Student Association during my senior year. Each of these leadership positions exposed me to a great deal of people with diverse cultures and opinions. Through my involvement at Temple, I was able to build relationships with students, professors, and administrators that helped me to grow and mature into who I am today.

Job wise, what are you going to do after you graduate?

I will be headed to Medical School in the fall of 2010. I am unsure as to what type of doctor I would like to be, but am open-minded in order to find my niche during my medical studies.

What's one thing you didn't expect to learn at Temple?

How important networking is! I mean, I knew about networking coming into Temple, but I always thought it was a buzzword. Also, I don't think I was confident enough then to just introduce myself to people the way I can now, but in the past year, networking has really become a way of life for me. I was first introduced to someone from Towers Watson (where I will be working after I graduate) at a luncheon and talked to her for the entire forty-some minutes that we were there, not knowing that she was a recruiter for the company. In the beginning of my career at Temple, I would have never thought that something as important as a job offer could come out of striking up a conversation.

What has been your most memorable experience during your time here at Temple?

There are a few. Definitely when the Phils won the World Series in 2008 and they clinched the NL in 2009. I have never seen such parties as those that took place on the streets of Philadelphia those nights. Another great one was the International Management Conference my student professional organization, Gamma Iota Sigma, hosted here at Temple. It was a weekend in October of 2009 and it was incredible to meet people from all over the country and even Canada and also to get closer to my fellow Gamma officers. Finally, the crazy snowfalls of the winter of 2010 and the snow fights with my roommates that ensued were definitely memorable. I think I was more excited for those two snow days than I had ever been for one in high school.

Where was your favorite place to go on campus or around Philly?

In Philly, definitely Kelly Drive. I am a runner and the Art Museum loop is one of my favorite running spots. My friend, Amanda, and I can be found running those 8.3 miles no matter the weather, and it is always a great time. Running has a way of clearing my mind of the stresses of school and work and there is no better place to run in the city than along the river. As for my favorite place on campus, I would probably say the "secret garden" next to the Diamond Club and behind 7-11. It was always so much fun to go there with my friends on early spring days.

What has been your most memorable experience while at Temple?

There have been countless memorable experiences during my time at Temple, but the most memorable was probably the time I spent studying abroad during the summer of 2009 in Oviedo, Spain. Studying abroad was an amazing experience in which I got to meet an amazing group of people from Temple, from across the country and across the world. I got to live in, and become a part of, another culture, which was truly a life-changing experience. I got to visit cities all across Spain and see and experience amazing things. It inspired my love for travel and I absolutely cannot wait to get back to Europe and have more fantastic experiences!

What is the most important lesson you have learned about yourself?

The most important lesson I have learned about myself is what is important to me. I have come to see over the course of my college education how much I value being close to my friends and family, as well as how important it is to make my goals and aspirations a priority. I love learning and I have come to see that despite all the hard work that comes along with it, it is something I truly enjoy and it brings me closer to where I want to be in my future.

Where was your favorite place to go on campus or in Philadelphia?

One of my favorite things to do when it is nice out is bike over to Rittenhouse with some of my friends and just relax, enjoy the sights and take in the nice weather. Afterwards I can't help but take a little pit stop over to More Than Just Ice Cream for a delicious, albeit unhealthy, end to the day. On campus, I love to do my work outside if it's nice enough, especially on Baury Beach.

What is the most important lesson you have learned about yourself?

I That I can forgive people and that I don't have to. I can choose to do it.

Where do you see yourself five years from now?

I Still in school getting my PhD and still with my partner who I've been with for three years, and happy.

Four years ago, could you have guessed you would be doing what you are now?

I No. Four years ago I was failing out of college, so I went to community college and got straight A's. I learned the only way for me to leave was through getting an education. I always wanted one but felt like I never had the tools to get one.

Did you hold any leadership positions at Temple?

I I'm a coordinator for the Women's Major and Minor Association and the student liaison for the women's studies program as well as president of the Queer Student Union. My involvement with women's studies gave me a sense that I was at home with the academic work that I do. The wisdom I've gathered from exploring my own and other people's lives is with me all the time. I never leave it at the door.

What is the most important lesson you have learned about yourself?

Being uncomfortable in an unfamiliar place or with unfamiliar people is one of the most beneficial experiences. If you're surrounded by like-minded people who rarely challenge you, it can be hazardous to your intellectual, emotional, and spiritual growth. At Temple, I've learned so much about my abilities and potential from situations that were initially uncomfortable. I excelled in classes I never thought I would succeed in. I stretched my boundaries.

Four years ago, could you have guessed you would be doing what you are now?

To be completely honest, it was my childhood and teenage dream to go to Temple University. In fact, I only applied to Temple, so one can imagine the thrill of my acceptance letter four years ago. I always envisioned myself as a Temple graduate and I've accomplished that goal. Now I'm off to bigger things.

Reflecting on your years at Temple, what is one thing you did not expect to learn?

I expected to be tested in the classroom, but I was just as challenged outside of it. I've met people from all over America and the world that have contrasting cultures and values. Gaining a better understanding of other's beliefs has helped me challenge my own, and in the end, only strengthened my own identity.

Where do you see yourself five years from now?

Working on television somewhere on the East Coast. My eventual goal is to be on a morning show somewhere in America or with ESPN.

MAJOR Biology

MINOR Cognitive Neuroscience

What is one thing you did not expect to learn at Temple?

I learned that no matter where you go to college, across-the-board we are all learning the same things. When I reconnected with friends from home who were at Ivy League colleges, I realized we were learning the same concepts and information in our respective classes. I learned that no matter where you end up at college, if you work hard to learn the material and you build good relationships with your professors, you are just as smart and competitive as the next college student. You make your college experience what it is.

What is the most important lesson that you have learned about yourself?

The most important thing I've learned is that I can truly do whatever I put my mind to. I picked a biology major knowing it would be very challenging and I would have to work hard at it if I wanted to succeed. There were times when I did not believe in myself or did not think I could get an A in a class or get into a competitive summer program. But time and again, I proved myself wrong. I've learned that the best feeling comes when you succeed at something you didn't think you could do.

What has been your most memorable experience?

The most memorable experience was my induction into Phi Beta Kappa honor society at the end of my junior year. I was so excited to receive such an honor. It was a true recognition of the hard work and effort that I put into excelling at college. It was so special because Phi Beta Kappa represents the same sentiments that I have had about education—that the love of learning is the guide of life.

How did your leadership positions at Temple help shape your life?

I have been a Resident Assistant for three years and it has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life so far. It has given me the tools to help others and has certainly helped me to see how much of a difference I could make in people's lives. Being Vice President of the Honors Activities Board was also a great experience in that I got the opportunity to lead as well as follow, and learning how to follow was a very important lesson in learning how to lead.

Four years ago, could you have guessed you would be doing what you are now?

No way, I could never have guessed that I would have had this much fun. I have had way more excitement in my life at Temple than I could have imagined.

What has been your most memorable experience at Temple?

Winning Homecoming King might be the most memorable, but I think the times I will take with me have been just hanging out with friends, learning people's life stories and taking in the moments.

Where was your favorite place to go on campus or in Philadelphia?

That big tree outside Shusterman and Sullivan Hall... I am going to miss that tree. It had great lumbar support. In Philly, it would be Naked Chocolate cafe; that stuff is delicious.

Four years ago, could you have guessed what you'd be doing now?

No way! I was sure that I would be a classic college student, walking around in pajamas and eating Ramen noodles. Instead, I get dressed every morning and eat Charleston Market and sweet tea from Eppy's. In addition, I never would have guessed that I would have found such amazing friends, had so many experiences and been blessed so often.

What is one thing that you did not expect to learn at Temple?

I didn't expect to learn so much about myself as a person nor the depth of my academic passion. To go to class and actually want to read beforehand, it still amazes me.

What has been your most memorable experience during your time at Temple University?

Any experience on SEPTA from a woman having a baby, coming back from my friend's birthday at Ms. Tootsie's and this woman telling my friends and I the many reasons Philadelphia was better than Orlando, San Diego and New York combined, having someone perform poetry, play the sax, sell books, ois, Sixers' season tickets and etc.

What is the most important lesson that you have learned about yourself?

The most important lesson I have learned about myself and life in general is that nothing is as pressing and stressing as you think it is. Take your time. "It will get done, when it gets done."

Where was your favorite place to go on campus or around Philly?

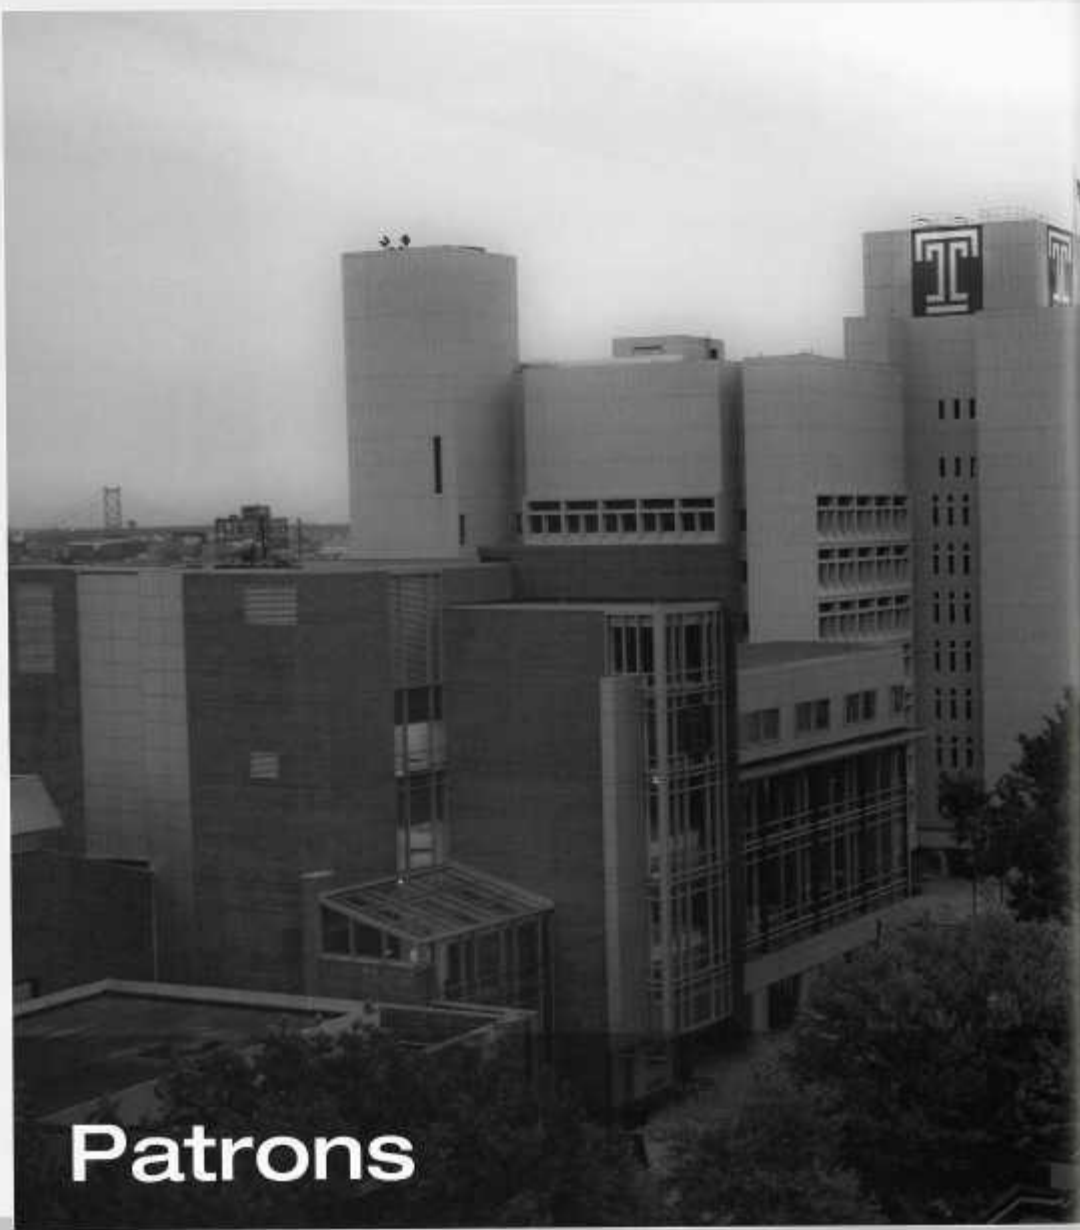

My favorite place to go on campus is definitely the Tech Center (aka Club Tech). It's great to see people, especially when you are all working on similar projects, going to the Starbucks and even the Help Desk.

Regarding a job, what are you going to be doing after you graduate?

I will be working in Washington DC at a non-profit organization catering to the needs of state and local governments or state and state-related universities.

Where do you see yourself five years from now?

Five years from now, I see myself completing my dissertation and receiving my PhD in Sociology and African American Studies.

Patrons

Templar Yearbook offers a chance for loved ones of graduating seniors to contribute a Parent Pride Ad and become a Parent Pride Patron. Patrons are those who choose to celebrate a graduating senior's accomplishments by publishing an ad in the yearbook. The ads, which include a picture of the graduating senior and a heart-warming message from loved ones, serve to add a genuinely personal touch to Templar. The patron is able to recognize a significant moment in the graduating senior's life. The personalized sentiments of pride and encouragement make the book a special memento for the graduate. Additionally, Parent Pride ads provide a medium through which graduating seniors can permanently remember the words of people who were there to support them throughout a challenging but rewarding college experience. This final section of Templar is a tribute to the accomplishments of students from a truly exceptional class.

On behalf of the entire Templar staff, we would like to congratulate Temple University's 2010 graduating class on your hard work and accomplishments. We hope that your time in college was everything you could have hoped for and we wish you success in all of your future endeavors. With the closing of this chapter in your life, we are confident that you will discover and seize the innumerable possibilities that lie ahead of you. It is our hope that you will be able to sit down with this edition of Templar and revisit the joys and milestones of your college years.

Sarah Kelly

"Now, I give you fair warning," shouted the Queen, stamping on the ground as she spoke; "either you or your head must be off, and that in about half no time! Take your choice!"

Way to go Dr. Adams!

Nicholas Dane Adams

So proud of you!

It is with great pride that your accomplishments be noted thus far in life. From All-Star baseball, AAU basketball, top state finisher in cross country to Salutatorian at Forbush High School, Outstanding Senior Music Award at High Point University and singing tenor on the Taccatones' New York produced CD, each step served as a foundation for this moment of becoming a Doctor of Podiatric Medicine. God opened doors of opportunity that now unfold into a prosperous future. Embrace the wisdom you have acquired, combine that with your compassionate nature and cultivate a medical practice of integrity and professional excellence. We are so proud of your accomplishments, but greater still in the well-rounded, mature and insightful individual you have become. We admire your perseverance and dedication toward achieving your goals amidst challenges that appeared insurmountable. Model that determination and steadfastness throughout your promising career.

We love you,
Mom and Dad

Congratulations, Roxanne!

You have heart and passion; you have values; you have belief in yourself and now you have knowledge. So go out there and show the world how you can make it a better place, and always remember the following quote:

*You make a living by what you get.
You make a life by what you give.*

We love you very much,

Twenty-One Years of Risk-Taking Pays Off

Kevin T. Kless

May, 1988 You were born. It was apparent from the start that you had a tenacious personality. You were fearless, strong-willed, determined. Invariably a risk-taker, you always had to climb higher, jump farther and run faster, often scaring the living daylights out of us.

We held our breath during the teenage years, and prayed our risk-taker wouldn't take any serious risks. They were some tough years, but you (we) made it through with more triumphs than tragedies.

May, 2010 You are graduating. We couldn't be any prouder! That tenacity, fearlessness and determination has served you well. From baseball and snowboarding, to California and Kansas City, you focused on something and you followed through. We admire that. Remember your sense of humor when you hit the bumps along life's path, and most important, know we always love you, no matter what. Congratulations, Kev!

Love,

Mom, Dad, Matt & Tim

Jasmynn Knox

Jasmynn,

When we gaze "through the looking glass" we love the young woman that is reflected back to us. She is funny, dependable, energetic, and loved. We know that her star shines brightly and the world is her oyster. Wherever she places her "sand," a precious pearl will grow. We know she will be the best JASMYNN possible! We are very proud of you and want you to: Be the Best of Whatever You Are.

Be the Best of Whatever You Are

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill
Be a scrub in the valley but be
The best little scrub by the side of the hill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass,
And some highway some happier make,
If you can't be a muskie then just be a bass
But the liveliest bass in the lake!

We can't all be captains, we've got to be crew,
There's something for all of us here,
There's big work to do and there's lesser to do,
And the task we must do is the near.

If you can't be a highway then just be a trail,
If you can't be the sun be a star,
It isn't by size that you win or you fall
Be the best of whatever you are!

Where have all the years gone?

Chelsea,

It is hard to believe that your days at Temple are coming to an end. Where has the time gone? We are so proud of you and all that you have accomplished during your college years. Now that your school years are through you will be starting out on a whole new journey in your life. We know that you can do anything that you set your time to and we hope life brings you everything you could ever possibly want. Good luck in all you do.

Being your parents has been one of the greatest gifts in our lives. We have watched with pride over the years as you have matured into an intelligent, loving, hysterically funny and beautiful young woman.

You are demanding of excellence in yourself, and bravely face up to life's challenges with determination. You have daringly taken on new ventures, never wavering to be the best you can be. You have seen difficult times along the way, but you were never deterred from your steadfast desire to succeed. There is no doubt in our minds that you will be successful in everything you set out to achieve.

Your ambition and hard work have taken you to the top. You graduate with honors at the head of your class. Our hearts will be smiling and beaming with pride as we watch you modestly walk down the aisle to Pomp and Circumstance. We applaud your success and are overjoyed to celebrate this distinguished milestone in your life.

You are indeed very special and we love you dearly. Continue to believe in yourself and never lose sight of your dreams. The future holds many wonderful opportunities for you.

Life is full of new beginnings, may this be one of your happiest ever.

Dearest Jemma,

What proud parents we are today! Congratulations to you our dearest daughter on this wonderful occasion of your graduation. You've worked so hard, but intertwined with all the discipline was a true love of your choice. You have been blessed with many talents and gifts. This is such a wonderful achievement and you have done it with such grace and modesty. Wishing you much joy and success in all your future endeavors. We all rejoice with you and embrace you with all of our love.

Much love always,

CHANGING THE WORLD

Imagine what it would be like if we could find a cure for cancer. Or an effective vaccination for HIV and AIDS. Or a medicine that could protect against heart disease or stroke.

Companies such as GlaxoSmithKline have already made breakthroughs that have saved millions of lives and hundreds of thousands more are living longer and living healthier.

So when we say our goal as a company is to help people 'do more, feel better, live longer,' it means a lot more than just another advertising slogan or corporate mission statement.

The work we've done in the past has led to some of today's most effective treatments; the research we do now and in the future could find the new medicines for tomorrow's cures.

Walgreens Pharmacists – Making a difference in patients' lives.

It starts out with the idea that helping people would be a great career.

You go to school, study, maybe support a family in between – all in pursuit of the dream to help people live healthier lives.

For over 100 years, we've built Walgreens around the same idea that the dream of counseling patients and changing lives becomes reality. As a pharmacy and healthcare company founded and run by pharmacists, our top priority is about improving quality of life through personalized, professional patient care.

This 'pharmacy-first' philosophy offers tremendous opportunities to work directly with your patients and enrich your career.

[In Closing...]

So ends the reflection of another great year. We've seen our share of ups and downs. Taking the King's advice from Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, "Begin at the beginning, and go on till you come to the end; then stop." We have made an incredible journey from when we entered our first classroom all those years ago. Now, that journey has seen its completion.

From this day on, we will embark on a new adventure; one with excitement, risks and, yes, even work. We will no longer be staring through the looking-glass at our reflection, but crafting our likeness into who we want to become. The new journey that we will be taking is life in the 'real world'.

We have learned to handle the challenges and struggles that meet us by bringing together our education and life lessons that have comprised our college experience. We have gathered knowledge and skills from our professors, mentors, and advisors to prepare us for the road ahead. Their guidance has taught us to not only reach for our hopes and dreams, but that we can achieve the unimaginable. The whole world is out there, waiting for us to make that difference.

"The time has come," the Walrus said, "To talk of many things: Of shoes -- and ships -- and sealing-wax -- of cabbages -- and kings -- and why the sea is boiling hot -- and whether pigs have wings."

In the previous pages, we have seen how academics, sports, organizations and people have impacted our lives. Not only that, but realized how they have become part of our reflection, discovering who we are and learning to live our lives to the fullest.

The Templar Staff and myself have worked very hard to put together this anthology. I sincerely hope that you have enjoyed this collection of memories that comprised Temple University 2009-2010. My wish is that when you reflect back on these times through the looking-glass, you will find cherished memories, stimulating education, invigorating friends and an overall wonderful adventure that was your college experience.

I want to leave you with these words one last time from Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking-Glass, and What Alice Found There, "Be what you would seem to be--or if you'd like it put more simply--Never imagine yourself not to be otherwise than what it might appear to others that what you were or might have been was not otherwise than what you had been would have appeared to them to be."

General Information

The 2010 Templar was created and produced entirely by an undergraduate student staff. Its 228 pages are printed on 100-pound matte finish stock paper for a press run of 3300 copies. It is published by Jostens in State College, Pennsylvania. Jostens representatives, Philip Klein and Dee Skelton provided much patience and guidance, making this book possible. John DiCarlo, Director of Student Media, served as the faculty adviser. Many thanks goes to his dedication and assistance in producing this book.

Cover

Designed, photographed, and produced by Editor-in-Chief Jared Vanderzell. It uses process color on a high gloss litho cover. The size of the book is 9x12".

Photography

Photographs taken using Canon EOS 30D and Nikon Coolpix 5400 digital cameras. Senior portraits and sports photography taken by Carl Wolf Studio, Inc., located at 401 Elmwood Avenue, Sharon Hill, Pennsylvania 19079.

Production

Produced using Jostens' online Yearbook Avenue and Adobe Creative Suite 4 software.
